NAME BOSTON FIRM IN FRAUD SUIT

135 MILLIONS PAID KREUGER IS SOUGHT

3 in Lee, Higginson Firm, Percy Rockefeller and Others Named by Bank

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—Suit against eight American directors of the International Match Co., asking an accounting of $100,000,000 allegedly "lost through negligence" and the recovery of $35,000,000 allegedly "lost through the illegal payment of dividends out of capital," was begun today.

The directors named in the suit are Frederic W. Allen, Donald Durant and Francis L. Higginson, partners in the banking house of Lee, Higginson & Co., now in liquidation; Adrian H. Larkin of Larkin, Rathbone & Perry; Henry O. Havemeyer, sugar magnate; John McHugh of the Chase National Bank; Samuel F. Pryor of the Remington Arms Co., and Percy A. Rockefeller, multi-millionaire nephew of John D. Rockefeller.

Federal Bankruptcy Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn signed the summons and complaint prepared for the plaintiff, the Irving Trust company, trustee of the late Ivar Kreuger's defunct match company.

150 MILLION IN U. S.

The summons and complaint ratified today by Ehrhorn alleges in part that although the American investing public put $150,000,000 in the International Match Corp., the directors allowed Kreuger to control it and manage its finances.

Although the corporation was a holding company for numerous match companies throughout the world, the complaint alleges the directors "neglected the subsidiary affiliates and let Kreuger select the directors for those companies from among his subordinates and associates."

It is also charged that the directors were negligent in that they allegedly left the management largely to Kreuger, who had other companies abroad with interests, according to the complaint, opposed to those of the International company.

CITES ILLEGAL DIVIDENDS

The part of the complaint dealing with the action to recover $35,000,000 dividends allegedly paid out of capital charges that the corporation injured its financial status by paying such dividends out of its capital structure since 1926.

Counsel for the Irving Trust Company today told the referee that there was a definite provision in the law making it illegal to pay dividends out of capital if the capital structure is thereby endangered.

The judgments demanded, with interest, are:

Allen, $36,258,118; Havemeyer, $27,877,326; Pryor, $28,597,326; Rockefeller $31,416,534; McHugh, $34,377,326; Higginson, $21,073,168; Durant, $35,788,910; Larkin, $34,595,742.

The complaint alleges 22 dividends were illegally declared.

"The assets of International," it continues, "are insufficient to pay the creditors in full, and a sum more than equal to the amounts of the said unlawful and unauthorized dividends declared and paid as alleged herein will remain owing to the creditors after the application to the debts of International of all its assets."

100 Reds in City Hall Rioting

Approximately 100 Communists congregated in School st., in front of City Hall this afternoon, and staged a demonstration which resulted in a police riot call for all reserves.

One girl tossing "red" literature to a huge crowd of spectators battled a policeman who attempted to stop her. She was seized by another policeman and rushed into City Hall.

Thirty-five uniformed police and 35 in plain clothes attempted to disperse the gathering and met with considerable verbal abuse. Supt. Crowley was in charge of the police detail.

The Communists congregated in the vicinity of the hall shortly after noon to protest the cutting down of dole.

Mary Sarian, 21, 864 Washington st., South End, was the first person placed under arrest as the reserves reached the scene.

MRS. DANA WEDS LACONIA MAYOR

Laconia, N. H., Aug. 29 (AP)—Mayor Charles E. Carroll today confirmed a report that he and the former Mrs. Lillian B. Dana, wealthy summer resident of The Weirs, had been married.

Mrs. Carroll has a winter home in Daytona, Fla. During the past year she has made lavish gifts to the Laconia Legionnaires, churches and charities which have caused her to be known as "Laconia Lady Bountiful."

Mrs. Carroll was the former wife of Edward Dana, general manager of the Boston Elevated Railway.

COAST GUARD TRIO OUSTED, 2 DEMOTED

Action Follows Probe of Raid at Club of Which Sec. Adams Is Member

Huge liquor seizures at Third Cliff, Scituate, and at the Glades in Minot, exclusive club formerly headed by Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, resulted today in dismissal of three Scituate coast guards.

At the same time it was learned that two other coast guards, one at the Hull base and one at the Gurnet station, have been reduced from motor machinist mates, 1st. class, to surfmen.

The three men dismissed at the Scituate base after a secret hearing by Washington officials, during the absence of the base captain, are Boatswain's Mate Arthur Nelson of Provincetown, and Surfmen Payson Brown of Brockton and Joseph Flores of Provincetown.

$45,000 RUM SEIZURE

The dismissals, the Boston Evening American learned, grew out of a $45,000 liquor seizure at Third Cliff last January by Chief of Police Michael Stuart of Scituate and some of his officers, and a raid last October in which three men were captured by Scituate police and $75,000 worth of choice liquors were found in a barn on the property of the Glades Club.

According to reports at the time of the Glades Club raid by police and coast guards, two other men escaped the coast guards during the scuffle.

Now—What—Mr. Stimson?

IMBECILITY is a harsh characterization of the foreign policy of a great nation, and yet the Hoover-Stimson interpretation of the Kellogg Pact, and their contention that it is our duty to take sides in every quarrel between nations, amount to just that.

President Hoover speaks of "the inspired outlawry of war"—not so very inspiring, we must say, if it means that the United States is in duty bound, as Secretary Stimson maintains, to inquire into every warlike controversy that breaks out in any quarter of the world and to mobilize the co-signatories of the pact against any nation which it decides—at long range and with meager information—is the aggressor.

* * *

IT WAS hardly a fortnight ago that Secretary of State Stimson revealed this view of the Kellogg Pact, saying that this country would NEVER recognize any treaty or agreement brought about contrary to its obligations.

We have not had to wait long for an indication of just how little acceptance the Stimson theory is destined to receive. From Tokio comes the announcement that Japan will proceed immediately to recognize the new state erected by her armed forces in Manchuria, in defiance of Secretary of State Stimson's declaration of policy and the provisions of the Kellogg Pact.

The Japanese foreign minister, in addressing the Diet, declared that experience has taught that the only way to deal with China is by force, a policy which his country has determined upon.

"It is admitted," said he, "by those conversant with conditions in China that no remedy can be effected by having recourse either to the covenant of the League of Nations or to any other organ of what may be termed machinery of peace."

NOW—what—Mr. Stimson?

At the Institute of Politics in Williamstown last week Foster Dulles, author of "America in the Pacific," seriously questioned the Stimson policy of

HECHT HOLDS DOLE PARLEY WITH MAYOR

Welfare Chief Defends Board as More Frauds Are Bared in Police Inquiry

Disclosures made exclusively by the Boston Evening American Saturday on the results of the police investigation of the first 500 dole cases, showing an alarming condition, led to a conference today at city hall, attended by Mayor Curley, Corporation Counsel Silverman and Chairman Hecht of the welfare overseers.

Chairman Hecht, while refusing a formal statement, saying that would probably come later from the full board, made informal answer to several features of the situation as laid bare by the police.

At least 25 of the 500 persons investigated said they received smaller amounts than the welfare department records show:

To this, Chairman Hecht replied:

"In cases where the wife tells investigators that she is getting less money than the welfare department says they are paying her family, the probability is that the husband who collects the money is holding out on his wife, keeping some of the funds for spending money."

VISITORS IN CIVIL SERVICE

Asked if he considered that anything in the disclosures affected the welfare department's visitors, Chairman Hecht said:

"We have to accept visitors in good faith from the civil service list. They are certified by the civil service commission. We have no reason to suspect them of dishonesty."

Regarding the unworthy cases, he said:

"More than 160 of those cases reported as suspicious are actually aliens. Under the law we have to care for aliens. Therefore the deduction that from 12 to 15 per cent of the first 500 cases are frauds is absurd."

According to the police figures, 65 cases warranted criminal prosecution and 148 more were undeserving. There are 186 aliens receiving doles of the 500 investigated, the police found.

It is understood that Chairman Hecht had a formal statement prepared at his office which might be released after the conference in the mayor's office.

TO PROSECUTE FRAUDS

Atty. William H. Taylor of the welfare board told the Boston Evening American, whose exposure of conditions resulted in the wide investigation of welfare cases, that

Norman Seeking More Time on War Debts

By WILLIAM HILLMAN
Universal Service Special Cable

London, Aug. 29—Europe's war debts to the United States, which are to be reconsidered at the pending world economic conference, are being discussed in the United States by Montagu Norman, president of the Bank of England.

This, according to published and private opinion today, is the purpose of Norman's mystery-cloaked journey to America under the assumed name of "Professor Clarence Skinner." Official circles remained silent as to Norman.

The Sunday Chronicle and Sunday Referee state that Norman is discussing stabilization of the pound sterling. The president of the Bank of England favors Britain's return to the gold standard. Such a return, according to the British view, is possible only if:

1—There is a general rise in international prices of raw materials.

2—The war debts question is solved, either by cancellation, the flotation of an international loan, or by some arrangement preventing a gold flow to America.

3—Some steps are taken to reduce the tariff barriers surrounding the United States.

In respect to the second point, a high authority close

AUTO RATES OUT BY WEDNESDAY

Insurance Commissioner Brown reiterated today that he hopes to be able to promulgate the 1933 tentative compulsory automobile insurance rates tomorrow.

The commissioner said their was still a good deal of work to be done, however, and that it might be Wednesday before the schedule is completed.

While it is known that the intention is to reduce the Boston and Chelsea rates about $1 and $5 respectively and to increase some of the outlying zones, the commissioner declined to comment.

Just What Boston Will See of Sun's Eclipse

If you have your smoked glass, or dark glasses or exposed photograph negative all ready, here is what you will see on Wednesday if you view the eclipse from Boston.

Boston will have a 99-degree totality or one degree less than a complete eclipse, such as will be witnessed in most of New Hampshire and part of Maine and Vermont, as well as the tip of Cape Cod.

You should be all ready for your eclipse viewing shortly after 3 p. m. daylight saving time on Wednesday, because at 3:23 p. m. the sun's face, from the right hand edge will first be nicked by the encroaching moon.

As the eclipse further progresses and the shadow over the earth deepens, birds will seek their nests, as at the approach of night.

At about 3:30 the moon shadow, traveling at the rate of 2000 miles an hour, will descend upon Boston. This descent will be followed by the appearance of Bailey's beads, a fine fringe of broken light about the sun's edge.

A second or two later Bostonians will see, entirely surrounding the moon's dark face, the glorious corona. The sky then will be dark as on a full moon night, and a few bright stars, as well as Jupiter and Mercury, will be seen, all close to the sun.

About 4:30 half the sun's surface should be covered by the moon and the afternoon will have begun to take on a dull gray appearance, with the temperature starting to drop steadily, even if slowly.

Just before and after the 99 per cent totality, flickering strips of light and shade—the shadow bands—will dance on streets and the sides of buildings.

For a brief 100 seconds, or less, the maximum eclipse will maintain and the bright corona remain visible. Then Bailey's beads will suddenly reappear, the bright western edge of the sun will burst out of the shadow, the sky will begin to lighten and, in reverse process, the eclipse will pass off—ending in Boston at about 5:35 p. m.

But don't forget to use smoked glass, dark spectacles or old and well exposed glass or film negative when you view the eclipse—except at its maximum totality. If you do not veil your eyes in this manner you may injure them seriously.

Millville Hops Tax Rate $26

Millville, Aug. 29 (AP)—The assessors announced today that the tax rate for 1932 is $75, an increase of $26 over 1931.

It was explained that this is due to a reduction in valuation amounting to $632,659, the greater part of which was on the United States Rubber Company's plant which has been closed since Oct. 1, 1930, and to Lawrence Felting Company, closed since February, 1930.

HIGH DIVE DARE COSTS HIS LIFE

Lowell, Aug. 29—A high-diving challenge cost one man his life and caused the arrest of a friend on a charge of drunkenness today just before an exhibition dive to open an American Legion festivity.

The drowned man was unidentified, officially, because his challenger, Thomas F. Kelley, 36, of Chapel st., was in no condition to tell his rival's name, police said.

Kelley, according to police, furnished them with at least 20 names for the victim, repeating the name "Reynolds" many times.

The two had been together, just before "Fearless" Foley, a professional diver, was to dive into the East Merrimac st. canal from the fire escape of the Prescott mill.

Kelley and the man later drowned had engaged in an argument over who could best Foley and then climbed five stories to make separate dives. Kelley was hauled out but the other man's body was not recovered for some time.

Balances and Receipts

Washington, Aug. 29—Today's Treasury balance, $356,198,089; U. S. customs receipts, $20,734,710.

COPPERS LEAD WALL ST. GAIN

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—There was active churning about of stocks in the exchange today, but profit-taking sales appeared in such volume that prices as a whole made little progress during the earlier hours of the session.

Such gains as appeared were largely in the copper, electric power and electrical equipment issues, a number of which rose $1 to more than $2 a share to new highs for 1932.

American Smelting Rose $2.75 to $24; Greene Cananea, $2 to above $20; Kennecott, nearly $2 to close to $17, and Anaconda, more than $1 to above $13 all reaching new high levels for the year. General Electric was bid up about $1.50 to Electric about $2 to around $41. Columbia Gas rose more than $1 to close to $20, and United Corp. $1 to close $13, both reaching new 1932 highs.

Rails and industrials generally, however, failed to follow. Union Pacific dropped $3 to below $79, and Santa Fe, $1 to below $56. U. S. Steel and American Telephone held close to Saturday's final prices.

HITLER STORM TROOPS OUT TO BATTLE VON PAPEN

CHANCELLOR'S DICTATORSHIP PLAN DEFIED

Hint of Stalin Role in Germany Brings Threats of Open Warfare

Berlin, Aug. 29 (INS)—Adolf Hitler's "storm troops" were called out to alarm duty today in anticipation of seriously threatening violence on the eve of tomorrow's opening Reichstag sessin and in the wake of a stormy dictatorial speech by Chancellor Franz von Papen.

The Nazi troopers were ordered to report to their nearest headquarters, uniformed and wearing knapsacks, as fast-rising political tension rose to a new high pitch, with many parties uniting in opposition to a sensational 12-months' economic plan outlined by Von Papen.

VON PAPEN IN STALIN ROLE

The plan revealed a new and relentless Van Papen, a chancellor determined to wield power like that of the Soviet dictator, Josef Stalin, and one who will attempt to crush Hitler's National Socialist party into submission. It will bear the approval of President Paul Von Hindenburg, and upon his prestige its success probably will depend.

The speech, delivered at Muenster, Westphalia, and broadcast by radio throughout the nation, aroused an unprecedented furor almost everywhere. A canvass of the new Reichstag showed that at least 560 out of the 608 members were irreconcilably opposed to it.

Von Papen unmistakably left Hitler but two roads to travel through the coming battle for power, either to meekly support the present government or to make the long-threatened "march on Berlin," seizing power by force of arms at the head of his "Brown Shirt" Fascist army.

COALITION OPPOSED

It was this latter possibility that excited the nation as a result of Von Papen's speech. The chancellor in no uncertain terms frowned upon a coalition of the Nazis and Catholic Centrists of former Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, by which Hitler could come to power legally.

Von Papen declared he was against all-partisan rule, and indicated he would keep his national-junker cabinet in power by dissolution of the Reichstag, following it up with Government by Presidential decree and some circumvention of the constitution.

The chancellor declared he was determined to stamp out "civil War," and firmly supported the sentencing of five Nazis to be beheaded for political murder.

The sensational economic program involved the raising of 2,000,000,000 marks (about $476,000,000) by discounting future taxes on industry and using it for state construction to employ 1,750,000 men from the ranks of the now unemployed.

TUNNEY SPEEDS TO AID PARTY

Bridgeport, Ct., Aug. 29 (AP)—Gene Tunney is on his way back from Europe to keep two political appointments and to resume his campaigning for the Democratic party.

The following cablegram from the retired world's heavyweight boxing champion was made public today by the committee arranging a testimonial dinner next Saturday for Archibald McNeil, national committeeman:

"Mrs. Tunney much better. Her mother here now. Could not think of missing dinner or disappointing Maine people."

Tunney is scheduled to make his first political speech outside of Connecticut at a Maine gathering. His wife was operated on in Paris for an ear infection.

The dinner for McNeil will be attended by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

3000 BACK IN JOBS IN MILLS

New Bedford, Aug. 29—Smiling faces and signs of prosperity brightened this city today as more than 3000 mill operatives returned to work after many months of idleness.

Four mills resumed operations on full time scales and others increased their help due to an influx of new textile orders. Others, including the National Spun Silk Co., and the Milan Silk Mills, will resume operations in a few days, officials said.

The four that opened today were the "B" section of the Nashawena Mills, the New Bedford Rayon Co., Gosnold Mill and the Butler Mill.

City officials were as much pleased as the returning workers, because of the relief on welfare funds, from which the idle workers have been aided.

LABOR BACKS ROOSEVELT

Providence, Aug. 29—Twenty-two delegates at the convention of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor voted to endorse Governor Franakiin D. Roosevelt for President

Nine delegates voted in the negative and approximately half of the delegates refrained from voting.

The motion, made on the convention floor, surprised the delegates, none of whom had received instructions in regard to endorsement of any candidates.

Previously, however, the convention had endorsed by a voice vote David S. Goldman of Provideence, Socialist candidate for State Treasurer of Rhode Island.

SMITH BACKERS FIGHT M'ADOO

San Francisco, Aug. 29 (AP)—Echoes of the presidential nomination struggle at the Democratic national convention mingled with wet and dry oratory in California today as candidates made final pleas for the state primary election tomorrow.

The record-breaking field of candidates, 649 for 134 offices, is matched by the heaviest registration in the state's history. The Democrats for the first time have passed the million mark. With 2,665,830 registered, Republicans top the Democrats by almost 500,000.

William G. McAdoo, who announced the shift of California's votes from Garner to Roosevelt at Chicago, is the storm center in the contest for the party's United States senator nomination.

His chief opponent, Justus S. Wardell, anti-prohibitionist and chairman of the party's state central committee, has the support of leaders of the Alfred E. Smith faction.

BRITISH STRIKE NEAR COLLAPSE

Manchester, England, Aug. 29 (INS)—The strike in Britain's cotton milling industry, which went into effect with the beginning of the working week this morning, was only 50 per cent effective, an early survey revealed.

The working and non-working mills were about evenly divided, although pickets were stationed at all mills throughout Lancashire. No disturbances were reported as the strike began. Although at present affecting only about 150,000 weavers, the wage trouble threatened to involve 500,000 workers in all branches of the industry.

Union leaders, according to present indications, expected a 100 per cent walkout in eight districts, a 50 per cent response in 14 districts, and in 11 districts only the slightest co-operation or none at all.

Analysis of Nation-wide Poll By Hearst Newspapers on Presidential Candidates

Washington, Aug. 29 (US)—The following tabulation shows the political party division of voters in the nationwide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. Those under the Republican headings voted Republican and those under the Democratic headings voted Democratic in 1928. The non-committal columns represent those who failed to designate on their poll ballot cards their stand four years ago.

Washington, Aug. 29—On the face of returns tabulated to date in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States, Gov. Roosevelt has a potential safe electoral vote of 333 to his credit, outside of the doubtful zone.

On the same basis of calculation, President Hoover has 32.

The doubtful zone, embracing those states where the leading candidate shows less than 60 per cent of the vote tabulated, represents the remaining 167 of the country's 532 electoral votes.

STRENGTHENS POSITION

A week ago, Roosevelt's potential vote, calculated in like manner, was 302. He thus strengthened his position 30 votes or 10 per cent with the addition of 41,000 poll ballots.

This was brought about by the swing of New York State early in the week above the 60 per cent mark on a heavy Roosevelt vote from New York city, which more than offset the Hoover vote of the week from up state. New York added 47 votes to Roosevelt's previous 302 of apparent safety, which in turn was offset in part by the shift of Indiana's 14 and Wyoming's 3 to the doubtful zone, leaving Roosevelt 332 at the conclusion of last week's tabulation.

With 106,078 votes tabulated in the poll, 62,128 are from former supporters of the President. These 62,168, however, when divided as between present Hoover and Roosevelt backers show that only 60 per cent are staying with the Republican nominee this year.

GRAIN BELT DEFECTION

Next to the Pacific coast, the defection is most noticeable in the grain belt of the Middle West, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Missouri in particular.

Of the 167 electorial votes classed as doubtful, 123 lean to Roosevelt and 44 to Hoover. The states included in this doubtful list, with their electorial votes, are:

States appearing safely in the Hoover column:

Colorado, 6; Delaware, Idaho, 4; Indiana, 14; Iowa, 11; Kansas, 9; Maine, 5; Michigan, 19; Montana, 4; New Jersey, 16; New Mexico 3; North Dakota, 3; Ohio, 26; Pennsylvania, 26; Rhode Island, 4, and Wyoming 3.

Kansas, Ohio and Rhode Island lean to Hoover, the others to Roosevelt.

Connecticut, 8; Massachusetts, 17; New Hampshire, 4, and Vermont, 3.

ROOSEVELT STATES.

States where Roosevelt has 60 per cent or better of the poll vote are: Alabama, 11; Arizona, 3; Arkansas, 9; California, 22; Florida, 7; Georgia, 12; Illinois, 29; Kentucky, 11; Louisiana, 10; Maryland, 8; Minnesota, 11; Mississippi, 9; Missouri, 15; Nebraska, 7; Nevada, 3; New York, 47; North Carolina, 13; Oklahoma, 11; Oregon, 5; South Carolina, 8; South Dakota, 4; Tennessee, 11; Texas, 23; Utah, 4; Virginia, 11; Washington, 8; West Virginia, 8, and Wisconsin, 12.

While Roosevelt strengthened his electoral position by his improved showing in New York State as compared with a week ago, Hoover made inroads on him in 31 States. The Republican candidate increased his percentage of the vote from one to five points in 31 States, correspondingly cutting down Roosevelt's percentage in those states.

GAINS IN MANY STATES

The states where Roosevelt cut into Hoover's percentages are:

Alabama, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Tennessee and Virginia.

Percentage gains for Hoover were recorded in these states:

Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, California, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Washington and Wyoming.

Hoover Gold Mine Ready to Shut Down

Perth, Australia, Aug. 29 (AP)—The great gold mine in western Australia, "Sons of Gwalia," which Herbert Hoover established in 1894 when he was a mining engineer, is doomed.

The reason is that production is failing and capital has been reduced by half to $935,000. There are several hands in Gwalia who remember Hoover.

That story of George Jessel, soon to marry Norma Talmadge after she divorces, seems to be right—for another proof is that Florence Courtney (above) is at Reno, ready for action. Evelyn Law Jans, New York stage girl, is also in the Nevada city. Divorce is thought to be reason. She refused to discuss why she was in Reno.

DATE KEEPS AL FROM LUNCHEON TO ROOSEVELT

Democratic Standard-Bearer Himself Explains Absence of Smith at O'Connor Party

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP)—Commenting on the absence of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate, from a luncheon in Governor Roosevelt's honor yesterday at Westhampton Beach, L. I., Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today that a previous engagement prevented Mr. Smith's attending.

The luncheon was given by Basil O'Connor, former law partner of the Democratic presidential candidate. The invitation to Smith, who opposed Roosevelt at the Democratic national convention in Chicago, was regarded by some political observers as a move to pave the way for a closer union between Roosevelt and his predecessor both as Governor and as Democratic presidential standard-bearer.

Since the Chicago convention, Smith has announced his support of the Democratic national ticket. Yesterday, during the Roosevelt luncheon, he went to Far Rockaway to visit his son, Arthur.

"The truth of the matter," Governor Roosevelt told newspapermen today, "is that Mr. O'Connor called up Al on the phone more than a week ago to ask him to be at the luncheon. Their conversation was extremely friendly but Al actually had a prior engagement and could not be there."

British Astronomer Coming to Harvard

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—Sir Arthur S. Eddington, director of the observatory at Cambridge, England, arrived on the White Star liner Baltic today to attend the astronomical congress at Cambridge, Mass.

He said he had made no plans for observing tomorrow's eclipse of the sun. The congress is scheduled for Sept. 2-9.

Now—What—Mr. Stimson?

not recognizing the results of Japanese aggression. He declared something must be done to prevent a further drifting of the two nations into a conflict.

And Huntington Wilson, former chief of Eastern affairs of the state department, in an address on the same day, directed a warning against Secretary Stimson's policy as tending to make the United States appear as the "Quixotic guardian" of Chinese integrity and the "CHIEF CRITIC AND HECKLER OF JAPAN."

* * *

OF COURSE, no sensible American wishes his country to be a heckler of any nation, but if President Hoover and Secretary Stimson cannot abandon so ill-starred a role, cannot they be made to realize that it involves grave danger to the peace and security of the United States?

If they MUST pursue a "diplomacy," which is RASH and DOGMATIC, cannot they see the importance of protecting the country from the inevitable irritation and resentment of a sensitive power, which finds itself singled out for our admonition and rebuke?

It is the hope of every good American that imbecility of the Stimsonian type will not forever—nor for long—direct the conduct of our foreign relations.

The United States hopes and pines for a self-contained and rational foreign policy built upon the mutual respect of nations and the non-interference by each in the concerns of others.

But as long as our relations with foreign powers are in the keeping and under the direction of President Hoover and Secretary Stimson, it is DOUBLY, TREBLY, ALL-IMPORTANT, that our national defenses should be maintained upon a scale of amplitude and a plane of efficiency that will assure the safety of our country.

• • •

TRUCULENCE and a meddlesome intrusion into the affairs of other nations are bound to issue in dangerous and critical situations.

Provocation, with no background but weakness, is a plain invitation to attack.

As long as Hoover and Stimson are at the helm, the NATION MUST LOOK TO ITS DEFENSES AND LOOK TO THEM WELL AND PROMPTLY.

It is the misrule of the present administration, which has brought the army and navy into their present condition of shrinkage and neglect.

Paul Shoup

Rapidan, Va., Aug. 29 (US)—While some of his guests indulged themselves in horseback rides, hikes and other diversions of the mountains, President Hoover spent most of Sunday on the spacious porch of his cabin Paul Shoup, vice-chairman of the Southern Pacific railroad, and Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker, were his most constant companions. Their conversation was understood to have been directed largely along economic lines.

Extreme quiet prevailed otherwise on the Rapidan as the President completed his usual weekend rest from work. It was planned that he and his party leave camp for Washington early enough today to get the President at his office by 9:30.

'Health Palace,' Opened by Duchess of York, Fails

Duchess of York

London, Aug. 29—The luxurious "Health Palace" on Harley st., opened by the Duchess of York last February, has failed.

The building to which London medical specialists subscribed 430,000 pounds with the idea of running a clinic on American lines, was intended primarily for the "white collar" class.

A receiver has been appointed by the debenture holders to administer the affairs of the great building, with its mile of corridors, which was built at and equipped at a cost of $2,500,000.

Taylorville, Ill., Aug. 29—Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney, may be retained in the fight against reduced wages being made by insurgent miners in Illinois and Indiana.

It is expected that miners in both of the states will join forces this week over the $5 wage scale fight.

Forcibly repulsed from Franklin County, Ill., strikers hesitated to make a new "attack" because of the warlike preparations of the authorities.

He made the statement over the radio in a speech to the American people. He will leave Wednesday aboard the Olympic to assume his new post.

BINGHAM FLAYS SEA GIRT SPEECH

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—United States Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut said today that Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt's castigation of the Republican administration's position on prohibition is "either laughable in its innocent assumption of Democratic sincerity or, to use his own words, 'something less than candid.'"

In a statement issued through the Republican National Committee to comment on the Democratic presidential candidate's speech at Sea Girt, N. J., Saturday, Senator Bingham said:

"When it (the Democrtic platform) says 'we favor the immediate modification of the Volstead act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer' I agree with him that the language is so plain and clear no one could doubt its meaning, but, alas, it was not honest and he ought to know it.

"Was he too busy to read what happened in the Senate after the 23 Democratic senators got back from Chicago and had a chance to vote on beer? Is he ignorant of the fact that only four of them voted to carry out the plain and clear meaning of the Democratic platform?"

UNWASHED DISHES LEAD TEACHER TO SLAY WIFE

PROSECUTOR TO RECOMMEND LIFE TERM

Gives Out Confession of Man Who Said Mate Had Been Killed by Hijackers

Marshall, Ill., Aug. 29 (AP)—A story of how H. C. Moor, 31, a Robinson, Ill., high school teacher, slew his 32-year-old teacherwife, Marjorie, because he had an exaggerated inferior complex and because he was tired of "unwashed dishes," was related by county authorities today.

TELLS OF HIS "DREAMS"

State's Attorney Miller said he would recommend life imprisonment for the prisoner if he pleaded guilty at the next term of court in November.

"I was tired of going home every night to a dirty house and a sink full of dishes," Moor was quoted as telling the state's attorney.

"We all have our dreams which can't be realized because the facts of life are hard. My dream was advancement in my own profession and a home with a devoted wife and happy children.

"But Marjorie was not a home girl. She wanted her own life apart from mine. Perhaps she was a better teacher than I. I wasn't sure about that. So we gradually drifted apart. It was intolerable.

Moor, the officials said, confessed he shot his wife to death in their automobile the night of Aug. 14. He was arrested at the time, but maintained he had been slugged and his wife slain by hijackers whom they resisted on a lonely road six miles from Marshall.

"I want to spend the rest of my life paying my debt to society by teaching in the penitentiary," State's Attorney Victor Miller quoted Moor as saying in his confession yesterday in the county jail.

"For a while I thought I'd kill myself. But to get out of the picture that way would mean she would have a second husband. At least I felt she would. We had loved each other and I couldn't stand to think of her marrying again.

"Every night I would return home to find the house dirty and the sink full of unwashed dishes. I swallowed by resentment, but I brooded. There was no quarrel preceding the shooting. I simply decided that the only way out was to kill her."

INFERIORITY COMPLEX

The couple had been in Indianapolis and were on their way home at the time of the killing. The authorities said Moor admitted he purchased the weapon in Indianapolis several weeks before the slaying.

Moor is a chemist and teacher of agriculture. His wife was prominent in women's club affairs and was recognized as a competent 4-H club judge.

State's Attorney Miller said that a feeling of mental inferiority on the husband's part was a moving motive for the shooting.

Moor and his wife both attended Butler University in Indianapolis. Mrs. Moor was graduated. Moor attended three years and then went to the University of Illinois, where he received his degree. In addition Mrs. Moor had attended the University of Chicago.

MOLLISON ON HOP TO SYDNEY

St. John, N. B., Aug. 29 (INS)—Delayed for many hours by fog, Capt. James A. Mollison, Scottish airman, resumed his return flight to England today, taking off from Nerepis, N. B., for Sydney, N. S.

Mollison got away at 10.25 a. m., E. D. T., announcing he would land at Prince Edward Island if bad weather made it impossible to reach Sydney.

Mollison, who motored out to Nerepis after spending the night at St. John, was compelled to wait some time before the fog lifted sufficiently to enable a takeoff.

From Sydney or Prince Edward Island, Mollison will fly to Harbor Grace, awaiting good weather there before taking off across the ocean.

Science Finds Key to Control of Sex of Unborn Babes

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP)—A method by which parents may control sex of their children before birth, described as successful in 77 out of 78 trials, was reported today at the international congress of genetics.

It involves use of lactic acid to insure that the expected baby will be a girl, and of bicarbonate of soda, an alkaline, to produce a boy. The method was worked out by Dr. F. Unterberger of Koenigsberg, East Prussia, and was described by Dr. Jacob Sanders of Roterdam, Holland.

Boys were born to 77 of 78 German women who used bicarbonate of soda, according to Dr. Unterberger's directions, Dr. Sanders said. Many of them had girl babies, and had expressed desires for male children. The woman who used the method unsuccessfully was believed to have failed to follow directions.

Testing the same method on rabbits, the use of lactic acid produced litters with twice as many females as males, and bicarbonate of soda reversed the proportion. Supersaturated solutions of lactic acid and soda produced respectively three females to one male and three males to one female.

Use of lactic acid on six cows produced 100 per cent female calves.

FLIER WINS AIR DEATH FIGHT

United Airport, Burbank, Cal., Aug. 29 (INS)—After a dramatic three-hour fight with death high in the air over the mountains of eastern California, Claire Vance of Oakland returned to the airport at 5:12 a. m. today, reducing the number of participants to four in the coast-to-coast speed flight.

The cockpit of Vance's huge red monoplane was flooded with gasoline. Vance explained the accident was caused by an eccentric siphonic action in the air vent which leads to the gasoline tank in the nose of the ship.

The airplane motor was spitting fire not more than two inches from the leaking gasoline and Vance's clothes were drenched when he landed.

"It was like sitting on a load of dynamite for three hours," Vance declared. "I kept on as long as I could, but the 400 gallons kept going into the cockpit and to have kept on would have been foolish. It's too bad."

The other four fliers who hopped off, Roscoe Turner, James Haizlip, James Wedell and Lee Belbach, were lost reported as safely winging their way toward Cleveland and New York.

The governor's decision was reached after he had conferred with John J. Curtin, chief of Walker's counsel, by long distance telephone.

Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley announced he would not make public until tonight his decision on the application of Walker for an order to stop the governor deciding on the ouster request.

ELY HAILED AS NOMINEE FOR PRESIDENCY IN 1936

GOVERNOR ASKS SUPPORT FOR ROOSEVELT

Wildly Cheered in Address Before Group of Smith Backers at Danbury, Conn.

Danbury, Ct., Aug. 29 (US)—Holding an audience of 4000 "last ditch" Al Smith supporters spellbound in a speech at the fair grounds here, Governor Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts announced that he would support the Roosevelt-Garner ticket and urged his hearers to follow his example.

"The Republican party is largely and strongly to blame for present conditions," the Massachusetts chief executive said. "Do you want a man who has done nothing to alleviate the situation or a man who will give us a change? That is why I am supporting the Democratic ticket of Roosevelt and Garner."

TARIFF LAW ASSAILED

The audience gathered to hear the Al Smith leaders declare their attitude towards the Roosevelt ticket. Their leader, Sheriff Thomas F. Reilly, who sponsored the meeting, in a speech preceding Ely's predicted Roosevelt's election and declared "four years from today Gov. Ely will be the Democratic presidential nominee." His prediction was wildly cheered.

The Massachusetts governor charged the Republican party with sponsoring the Smoot-Hawley tariff, "the highest tariff this world has ever known thus damming up our trade with Canada and Cuba and leading other countries to follow our example."

LIQUOR STRADDLE CHARGED

Ely indicted Hoover and Curtis for their wet and dry act, charged that Hoover himself had written the straddling prohibition plank in the platform and that both were slaves to the doctrine of political expediency.

The Governor's speech is believed to be the first time he has ever mentioned the Roosevelt-Garner ticket by name.

One referring to former Governor Smith of New York was made by the man who placed his name in nomination at the Democratic national convention.

"I have told you," he said, "that I am supporting the Democratic national ticket of Roosevelt and Garner. I have no doubt of the unselfish interest of either or their ability to control the legislation of the Democratic party.

MA FERGUSON LOSES LEAD IN TEXAS

Dallas, Tex. Aug. 29 (AP)—Gov. R. S. Sterling's lead over Mrs. Miriam A. (Ma) Ferguson for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination mounted to 3429 on additional returns from Saturday's primary election.

The latest tabulation by the election bureau gave Sterling 466,318 votes and Mrs. Ferguson 462,889. This was for 251 counties of the state, including 169 complete.

Rejected by a majority of the voters in 1926, when she sought a second term after serving as Texas' first woman governor, and defeated again two years later, Mrs. Ferguson came back strong in Saturday's voting.

Nothing like it ever had happened in Texas politics. Accustomed to bitter contests for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, tantamount to election, veteran observers did not expect such a close race as this one.

As hours passed and the lead passed from one contestant to the other, enormous crowds watched bulletin boards and eagerly snatched up extra editions of newspapers.

Man With Two Wives Finds Jail a Nice Place to Live

Wheaton, Ill., Aug. 29 (AP)—There's no place like home, but Charles Malousek prefers jail and most any kind of jail will do.

This, authorities say, is because he has two households and two wives.

He has spent one day in jail at Naperville and another in a cell at Wheaton, but he says he isn't particular where he is going as long as he has protection from two brothers of wife No. 2.

Malousek married Gertrude Hoffman a year ago, telling her, she said, that he had worked days as a special policeman in Brookfield, Ill. He told his first wife he had a night position at Naperville.

The authorities said the fact Malousek had one household too many was revealed at a wake for Mrs. George Hoffman, mother of the second Mrs. Malousek in Naperville.

His brother-in-law, Albert Hoffman, erested an uproar at the wake by announcing that Malousek had another wife in Brookfield.

Later another brother-in-law swore out a warrant, charging Malousek with bigamy and he was taken to jail in Naperville.

REGULARS 35 TO 46 SHORTS 35 TO 42 LONGS 37 TO 44 STOUTS 39 TO 46

MAYOR DEFENDS DOLE BOARD'S HONESTY

Mayor Curley, in a statement in which he expressed full confidence in the integrity of the welfare board, branded as "absolutely incorrect" a report that $2,000,000 a year was being paid out in fake welfare claims.

"My opinions," the mayor said, "are based on private investigations made under my own direction and on two investigations made by the finance commission.

"Irregularities were found, but these were not particularly great. From the reports of these investigations and from my own knowledge of the calibre of the men and women in charge of giving the city's money to the needy, I am of the firm opinion that the frauds are not as great as depicted.

HONESTY UNQUESTIONED.

"I have every confidence in Chairman Simon E. Hecht and my confidence extends to the other members of the board. They are among the most representative men and women to be found in the city.

"It should be remembered that these people have spent their lifetimes in social work and in assisting the needy. They are people who know all sides of life. They are people who have the consideration of the city at heart.

"I have found that they are fully cognizant of their responsibilities. They know what is going on. They are doing their level best to fulfil their duties righteously. They understand the situation.

"They have a big duty that they are determined to do and that is that no one in Boston shall go hungry. There is no reason, in my opinion, to question the manner in which these people are doing their duty. My confidence in them is complete.

HAD PLANNED PROBE

"I have talked with the welfare officials from time to time and have always found them aware of their responsibilities."

The mayor said he talked with Chairman Hecht three months ago concerning the advisability of calling in the police to aid in investigating welfare cases. The board, he said, was considering it on its own initiative. After further deliberations, the step was taken.

Atty. William H. Taylor of the welfare board explained that the law requires the city to aid the destitute whether they are citizens or aliens.

"Of course, there are some fraud cases," he said. "There are bound to be in such a large undertaking. Any large number of frauds, however, is another question. As yet we have no evidence of it."

his department wantey any citizen with information of fraud to produce it.

"We will not tolerate fraud, either within or without the department," said Taylor. "We will investigate every case of fraud presented and will prosecute if fraud exists.

"It's our duty to do that and we will do it. We want the public to have confidence in us. We believe we hav edon a good job in this emergency.

"I believe there is no fraud in the department. I have the greatest confidence in the personnel of the department clerks and visitors alike, who have worked heroically during the past three years, without regard for time. They are sincere and well-intentioned persons.

"I can't believe there are any frauds in the department. If any are discovered, we will act immediately. And any frauds among recipients of aid will, of course, be punished, which was what we had in mind when this board requested a special police investigation.

OTHER FRAUDS LISTED

"We are with the police department 100 per cent in the investigation and no attempts are being made to cover up."

Other results of the police investigation are:

Approximately 20 persons receiving aid for dependents, when actually they have only themselves to support.

Twenty-five persons listed at false addresses. Five cases in which the addresses stated are filling-stations, office buildings, factories or vacant lots.

Fifty or more persons with bank accounts or owning real estate.

Seven dead persons on the welfare list.

Persons receiving income from other sources, 49.

Persons with criminal records, at least 100, or 20 per cent of the cases investigated.

Non-residents of Boston, receiving aid, 5.

More than half the families have not been visited by welfare department agents for several months.

Worthy cases, 269—possibly a dozen more—out of 500.

The report, it is understood, also will touch on ownership of autos and other luxuries, and installment purchases of radios, clothing and household furniture.

One man on the welfare list, Alfonso Dueltacco, of Fay st., South End, was fined $20 and sentenced to three months in the House of Correction today for assault and battery on Mrs. Anna Baker, 40, of Fay st. Neighbors said he hit her in the eye with a tomato. Mrs. Baker appeared in court with her eye swollen and discolored.

Thomas Corsi, 38, of Edenfield ave., Watertown, who last week appealed a one month's sentence for larceny of $570 from the town welfare department, withdrew his appeal in Waltham Court today.

The sentence was then revoked on his promise to pay the money back at the rate of $2 a week—which will take him five and a half years. Corsi had $797 in a bank account and owned seven house lots, valued at $1600, according to testimony at his trial.

Removal of the entire welfare board and every visitor in whose district frauds have been found was demanded today in a public statement by City Councillor John F. Dowd, of Roxbury.

"The recent police investigation of welfare cases, if substantiated, demands more than a mere explanation or whitewash," said Dowd. "The charges of the police department are astounding and indicate not only laxness, inefficiency and carlessness existing there, but also collusion between officials and recipients of aid.

"During the past two years, knowing that this department was conducted in a slipshod manner, I attempted on several occasions to have a sweeping investigation there, which the mayor would not allow.

"This investigation by the police would indicate that at least $2,000,000 has been paid thus far to unworthy individuals.

"Our laws demand that every recipient of aid be thoroughly investigated before aid is given. If this had been done, there would now be no fraudulent cases for the police to discover.

"SHOULD REMOVE THEM"

"We are spending $1,000,000 a month in that department. How can Mayor Curley justify retaining in service the officials and some of the employes of this department?

"If the report of the police investigators is correct, then the mayor should immediately request the resignations of the entire board and of every visitor in whose district frauds were perpetrated."

City Councilor Clement A. Norton last night sent a letter to Mayor Curley suggesting that 500 city employes be taken from other departments and put in the welfare department, to aid in the checking up of applicants for aid.

Jail Term for Dole 'Cheat' With $4100

Fred Gader, Highland ave., Malden, was found guilty of larceny from the Malden welfare department and sentenced to three months in the House of Correction by Judge Davis in Malden district court today.

Gader appealed and was released on his own recognition for trial in Superior court.

Police testified investigation showed he had $1100 in a bank, while his wife had more than $3000. The welfare records showed he collected $3 a week from April to August, and was given $3.75 to get a pair of shoes, a total of $47.89.

Sperm Whale Brings Wealth to Fishermen

Hawk Point, N. S., Aug. 29 (AP)—"Wealth from the sea" is the motto of Nova Scotia's sea coast folk—and so they are taking advantage of the chance that stranded a sperm whale here. Fifty gallons of oil have been obtained from the carcas, and one fisherman is reported to have secured ambergris valued at more than $500.

RUM RUNNERS ESCAPE

In the Third Cliff raid, made by police without assistance of the coast guards, the rum runners escaped to sea with their boat.

The three men captured in The Glades Club raid were Louis Cohen, Manuel Schwartz and Louis Gordon, alias Leo Senft, all of Dorchester.

In federal court last February they were found guilty by a jury on an indictment charge of violating the tariff act. Schwartz was fined $1000 and given a suspended sentence of 18 months in the House of Correction at Plymouth. The other two were fined $500 each and given a year and a day suspended sentence in the House of Correction at Worcester.

SECRET HEARINGS

Ten days ago, in the absence of Capt. John J. Glynn, officials from Washington visited the Scituate coastguard base and held a secret hearing at which practically all members of the station were called in before the officials.

Then the officials left for Washington with a statement that word of the outcome would be sent back from the capital. The "word" came in the form of the dismissals of Nelson, Brown and Flores.

While the Washington officials were here they also held secret hearings at the Hull base and the Gurnet station, as a result of which Motor Machinist Mate Willard E. Mills of the Hull station and Motor Machinist Mate Frank Silver of the Gurnet station, found themselves demoted today to surfmen because of their "conduct," according to the official notification.

STAGE OF SCIENCE READY FOR NATURE'S MIGHTIEST CELESTIAL DISPLAY

Conway Hive of Activity in Preparation for Eclipse

Conway, N. H., Aug. 29 (AP)—This town and nearby communities, for the moment the astronomical center of the United States by virtue of the fact that they lie in the path of totality of Wednesday's solar eclipse, bustled with activity today.

Amateurs by the score were on the scene. They followed harassed astronomers about plying interrogations and as often as not volunteering views on every question on and under the sun.

Next to purely scientific discussion, and there is a great deal of that, every one here talks about what the weather will be Wednesday afternoon.

There was a general storm over the week-end, but everyone was agreed that the prospect for an auspicious week had been improved.

HUGE FOOD SUPPLY

It will be little short of a calamity for the local trades people if anything goes wrong Wednesday, for they have ordered huge stocks of food and supplies and there will be no other chance to dispose of them this year.

One story that 10,000 "hot dogs" had been ordered in anticipation of the throng was quickly superceded a moment later by a bystander's assertion that a single dealer alone had made arrangement for 30,000. Conversation dealt almost exclusively with things in terms of thousands.

FIREMEN VS. ECLIPSE

But be the crowd what it may Main st. is ready to put up a brave show. Although the scientists have been beguiled into the belief that the display is exclusively in their honor, there are plenty of posters around that tell another story.

The visiting state firemen are coming here next week.

Stores are gaily festooned and half way down the street a pretentious "eclipse headquarters" has been fitted up for the convenience of newspaper workers.

The first hitch hiker to the eclipse has reached town and is occupying the jail. He is Charles Marotta of New York city, a student of sociology at the University of New York.

When he arrived yesterday somewhat the worse for wear he told police he had little more than $1 and they promptly arranged to let him sleep in the local lockup which hadn't any other recent visitors.

Many temporary observatories have been built in Maine to study and photograph the eclipse Wednesday, which will be total in that state. This is the camp established at Limerick by astronomers from the United States Naval Observatory. The structure at the right is the framework for a 65-foot camera which will picture nature's greatest celestial phenomenon in all its phases. The eclipse will be total over a large part of New England, with Boston witnessing an obscuration of 99 per cent, but the scientists are primarily interested in obtaining pictures in color at the moment that the moon's shadow completely blots out the sun. The swath of darkness will be around 100 miles wide. More than a million visitors are expected to New England to view the weird drama, which will begin at 3:21 Eastern Daylight Time. (Staff Photo.)

'LOWDOWN' ON 'HIGHBROW' SUN LANGUAGE

BAILY'S BEADS—The phenomenon of the breaking up of the thin solar crescent into beads of light, round or oblong, during the eclipse. This happens immediately before totality and is ascribed to the roughness of the moon's surface. It thus shows again that the moon has very high mountains.

CHROMOSPHERE — The lowest layer of the sun's atmosphere, composed of incandescent gases, and only a few thousand miles thick. It generally has a rose color.

CONE—The shadow cone is the funnel-shaped part of the shadow directly behind the moon; only those observers who are in this shadow cone will see the eclipse as total.

CONTACTS—The first contact is indicated when the moon's disk for the first time encroaches upon the sun, and it thus determines the beginning of the partial eclipse. Second contact marks the beginning of totality, when the moon's disk for the first time entirely covers that of the sun. Third contact marks the end of totality, and after fourth contact the eclipse is over and the sun is "all there" again.

CORONA—The sun's crown of glory, its outer atmosphere, and the most overwhelming part of a total eclipse. It consists of a pearly radiance emitted from the sun in all directions to distances of many millions of miles, but its light is so faint that it can be seen only during totality.

CORONIUM—The mythical substance which was supposed to constitute the corona and emit the greenish light. Nowadays chemists and physicists are inclined to the view that the corona light is produced by some of the lighter gases, such as helium or hydrogen.

FLASH—The instantaneous appearance of the chromosphere, a fraction of a second before totality gives rise to the "flash spectrum" when its light is analyzed in the spectroscope.

PARTIAL ECLIPSE—The eclipse is called partial for all places where a little part of the sun remains visible all the time, as in this case in Boston.

PENUMBRA — The moon's half shadow, which envelopes all places for which the eclipse is partial.

PROMINENCE—The small jets of burning hydrogen, crimson colored, and caused by eruptions on the sun, are called prominences. They are generally so close to the sun's surface that they can be observed only during totality.

PHOTOMETER — An instrument used to measure the intensity of light.

SAROS—A time interval of eighteen years ten days, being 223 times the time elapsing between two successive new moons and 242 times the period of the moon in its orbit around the earth. For this reason it is the principal period between eclipses; any eclipse which happens is repeated after eighteen years and ten days.

SHADOW BANDS—The mysterious bands of light and shadow flitting over the surface of the earth just before and just after totality. Their origin is as yet unknown.

SPECTRUM—When a ray of light is passed through a prism, i. e. a wedge-shaped piece of glass, the light is broken up into its primary colors; the resulting rainbow is called a spectrum.

SPECTROGRAPH — The instrument used to photograph a spectrum.

TOTALITY — Only those places which are in the narrow path traced on the earth's surface by the moon's shadow will see the sun totally obscured; accordingly, this is called the path of totality.

UMBRA—The Latin word for shadow, it is used to indicate the conical part of the moon's shadow inside which the eclipse is total.

Million Tourists to Visit N. E. for View of Eclipse

New England is the mecca for an army of tourists who are taking up vantage points in Massachusetts and Maine to witness the most awe-inspiring of all celestial spectacles, a total eclipse.

Gauged by the 1925 eclipse which brought hundreds of thousands of persons to Westerly, R. I., and where totality was longest, the eclipse Wednesday promises to bring more than a million persons into New Englanad.

The eclipse draws a band of black across Eastern Canada, through Three Rivers and Sherbrooke and slides southeast diagonally across New England.

Last minute preparations are being made today by scientists in almost 50 camps, testing observation instruments.

WEIRD DRAMA DUE

Those who gather in the totality zone will have the experience of a lifetime. The dropping of the curtain over the sun is to everyone a weird drama.

Capt. Albert W. Stevens, head of the army photographic corps, will take off today in a plane from the Boston Airport to study the territory over which the most important pictures of the eclipse will be made.

The plane, piloted by Lt. C. D. McAllister, will carry equipment to study the eclipse from a height of 27,000 feet.

Stevens will use two types of cameras, one a long focus with which he has taken pictures of the Rocky Mountains while flying 300 miles away, and another a short focus camera which will cover a territory nearly as large as the moon's shadow viewed obliquely.

STORM MENACE LOOMS

Weather reports last night revealed that conditions for viewing the phenomenon from the ground may not be favorable. An extensive storm area hung over western Canada north of Montana, with a low barometer reading.

The flight will be conducted through the co-operation of the Army Air Corps with the National Geographical Society. At an altitude of better than five miles, with only extremely rarified air between the camera lens and the sun, and with a greater wealth of actinic rays, it is expected sharp photographs can be taken to show in dramatic fashion the lurid tongues of flames of the prominences and the delicate streamers of the sun's corona.

JAPS STUDY IN MAINE

Scientists and astronomers have set up camps in various places in New England. At Alfred, Me., three Japanese from the Imperial Tokio University await the eclipse after a trip half across the earth.

On the Cape are more scientists, among them many women. At North Truro, where the eclipse will be total, Miss Margaret Harwood, director of the Maria Mitchell Observatory of Nantucket, will be in charge of an expedition. She will be assisted by Miss Marjorie Williams of Smith College.

Miss Annie Cannon of Harvard University, acknowledged as the foremost woman astronomer in the world, will be on the outskirts of Gray, Me., with a Harvard group.

Every part of New England will share in at least a partial eclipse. Boston will see a 99 per cent total.

It will start in Boston at 3:23, daylight saving time and reach its maximum at 4:32.

PROTECT EYES

In some of the upper New England places the sun will be in total eclipse for 99 seconds, which is about the average for this part of the world. Eclipses in the tropics sometimes maintain totality for five minutes. Only when the sun is in total eclipse should it be seen with the naked eye. At any other time serious injury may be caused to the eyes.

Northeastern University will have three naval planes from Squantum to go up 15,000 feet with calibrated aerographs and photographic equipment.

The Sproul Observatory will also have a plane with army fliers up 23,000 feet over Derby, Vt.

A partial list of the major expeditions includes the Mount Wilson Observatory at Lancaster, N. H., Lick Observatory at Fryeburg, Me.; Sproul Observatory of Swarthmore College at Derby, Vt.; Franklin Institute at Conway, N. H.; University of Michigan at Fryeburg; Case School of Applied Science and Perkins Observatory at Douglas Hill, Me.; Harvard University at Gray, Me., Georgetown College at Fryeburg; Wesleyan University at Center Conway; Cornell at Center Conway; Imperial Tokio University at Alfred, Me.; Science Service group on Mount Washington; United States Naval Observatory at Limington, Me.

$1000 CHOW HAS WANDERLUST

A sudden attack of wanderlust nearly cost Henry J. Kennedy of 274 Brookline ave., Boston, his chow dog, Buttons, last night and caused the police no end of worriment.

Buttons, who is black and valued by his master at $1000, while strolling with Kennedy through the evening shadows of Brookline, slipped away into the night.

Kennedy, who was more than just upset by his apparent loss, called police, and the dog's name was sent over the teletype.

The police, however, were on the job, and Buttons was taken to Brookline police station early today and his master collected him later.

Frances Long of Dorchester is testing her smoked glass in preparation for the eclipse. Observers are warned not to watch it with the naked eye, except at the moment of totality, as serious damage to the retina of the eye may result. View the eclipse through a smoked glass, or better still, use a developed camera film. (Staff Photo.)

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

I Knew You When:

Lately I've met a lot of men,
To whom I could say, "I knew you when!"
They seem to forget the long road up—.
That every dog was once a pup.
Not always do they remain on top.
And when sliding down, they seldom stop.
It isn't so funny to them then
To hear one say, "I knew you when!"

—MARGE.

About to Leap!

Everything's quite okey with Pelham Hall's David Levin since his clever former secretary, Mildred Siskind, yess-ed him . . . It looks like a before Christmas knot-tieing, too . . . All of which automatically removes Dave—with honors galore—from our eligible bachelor list! . . . 'Twon't be romantic whisperings you'll hear Sept. 7, during the Dorothy Bradford's moonlight sailing, because the South Boston Al Smith Associates will be pacing her decks with politics on their minds and in their hearts! . . . Madam Carrie G. De Loriea has been in Montreal a week now, enthusiastic over the great work Dr. Locke is doing for her, which should put her crutches and private ambulance riding in the background forever . . . Malden's Rutina Anderson so goofy about columnists that when she heard of one who was sailing for America last week, she cut short her France galloping so that she could sail on the same boat with said columnist . . . But we'll forgive her for rubbing it in since the party in question was none other than our favorite, O. O. McIntyre!

A Bit of Scotch

Coolidge Corner's Bob Sullivan sends us the one about the Scotchman who, when asked why he held his nose whenever he took a drink, answered, "The sight of a drink makes my mouth water, and I don't want to dilute it"

Honeymoon Town Ahead!

We actually heard Pauline Sawyer say those "I—do" words to Eugene Umland, Friday evening, in Winchester's First Congregational Church . . . 'Tho Gene was a bit anxious for his bride to reach the altar, and Pauline was near a Mona Lisa for seriousness, while she was getting there . . . No one could say that they weren't proud and sure of their promises—there in the peaceful church . . . A real movie bride and bridegroom . . . Except that, coupled with their looks, those two had cleverness and intelligence radiating through it all. Note for our lady readers: Pauline wore an almost tailor-cut white satin robe . . . Severely plain, with her striking sicked back hair do-up offset with a coronet-style gossamere veil . . . William Kennedy and his ten stores' representatives were all there, since the handsome bridegroom is a member of their organization . . . Mrs. Kennedy, lovely in pale pink lace, with dancing eyes that were not missing a thing, had on one of those new shoulder capes of sables! . . . Brookline's James King and Mrs. King, in black lace with a cute velvet jacket and toque, were the happiest looking couple we saw . . . And they've been trotting along side by side for some time, too! . . . The Joseph L. Breens, of Brighton, with Mrs. Joseph in Russian blue and the Peter J. Gilloolys, of Jamaica Plain, were nodding their heads approvingly . . . Providence's Mrs. Bernard Clary, in scarlet figured crepe, tall, statuesquely beautiful, was one of the striking looking guests . . . And Andy Sheridan, with his flip witticisms, and his pleasant little frau in the new wine shades . . . And Brunette Gertrude Griffin of Chelsea, with blonde Madeline Clinton (in summer chiffons), were ones we couldn't miss . . . Starr Burdick, sitting up very tall in his pew, with his wee wife, in white satin, just reaching his shoulders; the Fred Wasnges of Providence, and the Clarence Lewissons of Melrose were all probably reliving the day they made those same promises to each other!

Bridesmaid Belle

Was Helen Murphy, one of the six bridesmaids, who emanated such charm and what it takes that we caught the bridegroom's nifty brother going into a corner-huddle with Helen, pencil and paper in hand . . . Something tells us that Mary will hear more of the Umland family . . . And her cute eyeshade transparent hat veil added just the touch to her intriguey appearance . . . And Mary Clinton, the maid of honor, attired in tobacco brown velvet, had plenty of onpurpose peek holes in her outfit. Her had showed her blonde marcel peeking out and likewise the back of Mary's dress . . . Naturally, when the organist played "Danny Boy" before the bridal party began to do their stuff, Dan Nusbaum, pal of the bridegroom, thought it was being played expressly for him—with an added cheer for dear old Hickox! . . . .

Around-the-Townings:

Joe Rines, playing "Strange Interlude," cures anyone's hiccoughs and hopped over to Manhattan yesterday on Big Business! . . . Incidentally it might stagger the Depression propagandists to know that more than 80,000 bottles of ginger ale were sold the past season at "Show Boat" to more than 60,000 people . . . Last Spring, when George Jessel and Norma were in town—on a husky trip—they thought they could stepout to Seaglades with no flashlight cameras in their wake . . . But they thought wrongly and George received plenty scoldings from his Lovely Lady when he exited with her out the back door, dragging her past odriferous garbage barrels, etc!

Los Angeles, Aug. 29—You might as well prepare yourself for "42nd Street." It's to be Warner Brothers big contribution for 1933, or maybe it will be released by late 1932. Nine important roles will be played by nine headliners. Kay Francis, George Brent, Joan Blondell and Warren William join Ruby Keeler, who has already put her John Hancock on a contract.

Not since Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer came through with "Grand Hotel" and Fox followed with an all star roster for "State Fair," have there been so many names in a single picture. The other four to be seen and perhaps heard in this drama with music are Dick Powell, Frank McHugh, Guy Kibbe and Glenda Farrell.

Mervin Leroy, the director, has already put in a call for one hundred beautiful girls for the ensemble.

Kay Francis With Coleman

Inexperience is a terrible factor against success on the screen. That's why so many film aspirants who come to Hollywood never reach the screen. Dorothy Hale, despite social qualifications and artistic ability, has been taken out of Samuel Goldwyn's picture, "Cynara," and replaced by Kay Francis. Miss Francis has both experience and a name, both necessary in playing opposite even as great a favorite as Ronald Colman. She has been borrowed from Warner Brothers to fill the breach and will start work Monday. It's Kay's second picture with Ronnie. She was his leading lady in "Raffles" and they are a great pair on the screen. Both of them know their stuff.

Gary a Hunter

The walls of Gary Cooper's house are covered with trophies that he shot in South Africa. His living room has lions' heads snarling from the walls, rare deer and other denizens of the jungle.

Gary Cooper

Eighteen hundred miles from civilization, Gary not only captured these animals but he took motion pictures, some scenes containing shots of himself a la Martin Johnson in his picture. Countess Frassi, who was a member of this expedition, shared in some of these hazardous adventures. With very little trouble, the scenes that Gary shot could be incorporated into a two-reeler.

Columbia Presents Mystery Deftly in "NIGHT CLUB LADY"

Excellence in Movie at Boston; Keith Screen Has 'Back Street'

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

RKO Boston this week makes it two in its big debts to Columbia craftmanship in making superior movies. The recent masterpiece, "American Madness," is closely followed by another success, "Night Club Lady." This latter proves one of the best of all the mystery thrillers, having expert treatment at all three angles, story, acting, direction. It is a good sign for motion picture prosperity that both RKO houses have excellent films, Keith's featuring a splendid one in "Back Street," based on Fannie Hurst's novel.

Adolphe Menjou creates the Thatcher Colt role in the first of an Anthony Abbott series, "Night Club Lady." Mayo Methot, lady with a past and owner of a whoopee resort, is threatened with death, the hour being named. Menjou, the police commissioner, and a squad of his best men surround her. Ticks the clock slowly—one feels the approach of doom. Tragedy strikes home—Miss Methot dies in the center of that circle of protectors.

Thereafter, ocean phoning and other highlight incidents tread upon one another's heels so fast they follow in this corking detective fiction. Every performer stands out, comedy relieves the tension — one is abundantly thrilled, and at proper moments gently released from the nervous tension. Skill in all departments takes the place of the usual hokum in such films; acting and direction sustain the suspense in marvelous manner, and dollars to dougnuts you cannot guess who is the slayer out of the half dozen suspects.

We cannot recall any tale of the type that has entertained us so completely. You will like Menjou, abler than ever with tongue and miming; you will accord warm greeting to Ruthelma Stevens, a newcomer; to Miss Methot, and all the rest of these actors. And bethink you of Irving Cummings. The director, using his cameras as handily as the best here or abroad.

Universal's "Back Street" is another classy picture. Herein, through clever handling, a ticklish moral problem is presented without offense. In the illicit romance of the story, Irene Dunne loves blindly, devotedly, the man who cannot wed her. Here is a worthy characterization, proving that she is one of the best of filmdom's actresses.

John Boles as the man in the case, is something new—not the John of the hero attitude and voice, but a well poised, thoroughly human being, acting beyond anything we expected he cold do. The rest of the cast is capable, too.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., deserves credit for his discreet treatment of a theme that could easily be dynamite.

It so happens also that both RKO houses have superior vaudeville bills.

At Keith's the topliner is Bill Robinson, heading a troupe of colored folk, all talented. The great tap dancer is a brilliant entertainer in his class, and is given a triumphant reception. With him are a number of Negro stars, all heartily applauded. Other swell acts are those of Eddie and Ralph, alias "Sisters of the Skillet" of radio renown; Bobby Pinkus, in "Getting Hot"; Marion Chase and Mildred MacDonald, singers; Joe Bell and Sister, and the fine Wing Wah troupe.

At the Boston there are two show-stoppers, plus generous talent in half a dozen acts. Two whistlers, the best of the kind we ever heard, win an ovation; they appear in one of the acts but some day will blossom out as headliners on their own. The comedy team of Doris Canfield and Eddie Allen is likewise a smash hit, especially Miss Doris. All the rest of the acts are good, especially Rood and Rood, clowners from Europe.

CAPTAIN COURAGEOUS

Meet Cap'n Noah of "The Green Pastures," coming on Labor Day to the Colonial. Cap'n Noah wears regulation U. S. regalia and argues unsuccessfully with "de Lawd" on likker stores.

Snappy Revue at Howard

Snappy burlesque, vaudeville and talking pictures hold forth at the Old Howard. The management is presenting the Empire attraction known as the "Ballyhoo Review." As a special added feature Hinda Wassau presents her artistic dances.

In addition, the Crystal Trio are seen in an act of speed.

Good Acting in Tropic Drama

A tropic drama, finely acted, holds the feature place on the new Fenway-Modern-Beacon program. It is "Passport to Hell," boasting an excellent cast. Best of the performers are Alexander Kirkland, Elissa Landi, Paul Lukas and Warner Oland. Kirkland is particularly good.

FARM STRIKERS TO CLOSE ROADS IN IOWA

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 29 (AP)—A stern warning that their lines would be "air-tight," came today from supporters of the farmers' holiday movement. A blockade of every highway leading into this important central Iowa market, was their objective.

The picketing farmers, numbering little more than 250, were content yesterday to confine their activity to a half dozen roads. All trucks carrying produce and milk were halted with the pickets attempting to persuade the drivers to turn back with their cargo.

In only a few cases did trucks fail to run the blockade. Des Moines dairy heads estimated that 90 per cent of the city's milk supply was delivered.

Meanwhile, in the city proper, representatives of the Des Moines Co-Operative Dairy Association met with farm holiday leaders but could not reach an agreement. The farmers are asking the dairy association to give its support to the holiday movement.

FEAR GIRL, 14, KIDNAPED BY 3

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP)—A girl, believed to have been kidnaped by three men, was the object of an intensive hunt by police today.

The girl, Mary Fanara, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fanara, disappeared Friday shortly after she had accepted a ride in an automobile in which were three men.

Police said her parents told them the men stopped in front of their house and asked Mary if she wanted to ride to the home of her married sister. One man, the parents said, was a former acquaintance.

New York City police were called into the search when it was learned the man known to the family had been living there.

Surgeon Saves Boy Shot Through Heart

Vienna, Aug. 29 (AP)—Rudolf Datelmaier, an 11-year-old boy whose heart was pierced by three birdshot in a hunting accident on Sunday, today was reported recovering after a remarkable surgical feat by Dr. Gustav Felsenreich of the University of Vienna.

The surgeon sewed up the three wounds and removed the shot.

Rome, Aug. 29 (AP)—Hereafter the shouted Fascist salute will be reserved for Premier Mussolini alone; all others must be content with the Roman salute of the upraised arm which may be given only while standing. These regulations were made "to maintain the dignity of the Fascist customs."

Voice of Broadway

By Louis Sobol

A Broadwayite Turns Mountaineer

As those of you who have followed me through the years might have expected, I'm not one to let a vacation in the mountains pass without making some comment about it. Mr. Yawitz of the Mirror, I am told, informed his readers that the Messrs. Sobol and Lee Chumley and the Doctors Leo Michel and Nathaniel Lief trekked up into the primitive fasness of the Adirondacks in a private back-to-nature movement. That was more or less true. We spent the two weeks on Chumley's vast acreage somewhere north of Stony Creek with a lake caressing the back door steps, a mountain range as a fence, deer as early morning visitors and George Bell, former star pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, as our nearest neighbor. It was Bell, who when asked about the weather conditions in the district replied, "We have two seasons here, August and winter." It was Bell, too, who offered a contribution to what was to have been the first column upon our return. About the lad who went to a doctor in Stony Creek and said he had pains in the back and pains in the front. Whereupon the doctor advised him to take out all his teeth. "Sure," answered the patient, and laid his two false sets out upon the table. We all laughed very merrily at that and I didn't have the courage to tell George that the laughter didn't come from the heart because our memory was so good and our recollection of the gag as it first appeared in the now defunct Puck magazine still vivid.

The costumes that we wore were nothing much before and rawther less than 'arf o' that behind. Only Mock, our Oriental cook, maintained the dignity of conventions. Mock insisted upon wearing trousers and jacket and forced us to go 22 miles as a sober crow flies to Hadley to buy him a black bow tie without which he refused to cook or serve. We went to Hadley but there were no black ties so Michel bought a pair of shoes and donated a shoe string to Mock for a tie. Thereafter four men of Broadway and a lad of China dwelt together in a cabin in peace and contentment. No newspapers reached our mountain hut. The radio balked—we went into complete isolation.

A place of divine and tender beauty this spot. When the sun sinks behind the mountain barrier, a mist rises and forms an opaque lake half way to the heavens. The refulgent moon's rays play upon the surface and up above, the stars shining out of the black drape of the skies are reflected as pinpoints of light in the creamy veil below. You stand outside your cabin door and wonder how in the world you could have permitted yourself to work yourself up into a fever of excitement over the one or two little inconsequential episodes over which you worked yourself into a fever of excitement. Chumley shakes you at an unearthly hour in the morning just as the sun is raising its head over the hill and drags you out to stare at the lakes. And there you see not more than 200 yards away, four deer, one of them a lavishly antlered buck, their heads bowed gracefully as they dip gentle mouths into the water. The sun climbs steadily and lo, you look over in the other direction and there is the moon, too. Sun and moon, sister and brother of the heavens, both out at the same time. And a puny Broadwayite can do nothing but stare and wonder—wish, perhaps for the first time in his life that he were a poet—or a painter.

Two weeks in the wilderness can be eventful. A columnist who can't swim attempts to guide his canoe under a low-hung bridge and the craft capsizes. Coincidentally enough on the very day that your paper carries a reprint of the column you titled, "The Funeral of a Colyumist." Nothing worse than a ducking happens, however, for the lake at that point is shallow and rocks furnish steps to safety. You endeavor to convince your pals you're a sure-shot, one-bullet huntsman and lift your rifle to bring down a hawk. You slip and the bullet whizzes just a fraction of an inch over the head of Michel practising put shots 50 yards away. You shoot an arrow into the air and in its swift descent it scrapes Lief's neck. On the very night you arrive, you skid into a ditch and the two left wheels sink into the mire, the car almost overturning. George Bell arrives and with chains and the assistance of some campers hauls you out. They'll talk about that for months to come as they gather around the pot-bellied stove in the little West Stony Creek post office. Even to this day, for instance, they'll tell you about the school teacher in the little mountain school who insisted upon telling her pupils that there was no such thing as a stork bringing babies. So they dismissed her and she sued for reinstatement, claiming she could prove that storks didn't bring babies. One of the school committeemen was mighty wroth at that and said, "he'd be durned if they'd let any of these here modern women with their outlandish and heathenish ideas corrupt the children."

Indoor games assume importance the farther you get away from Broadway. Hour after hour at night, we played lottoes, hearts, baffle board, casino and some contraption in which you wind a string around a wheel and pull and six horses of different colors gallop to a post. Played these games, wrangled bitterly and almost came to blows one night. The situation was cleared when Mock came in with a set of freshly baked apple dumplings. Peace and goodwill were restored immediately.

Romances in this district there must be—but I was too lazy to inquire. Chumley, however, took me to a clearing in the woods where there were still traces of a recent encampment. A circle of stones with three sticks propped over them from which a cooking pot had evidently been suspended over the flames. "A middle aged woman and her husband drove up here about five weeks ago," Chumley told me, "and asked could they spend the night camping on this spot. I said, 'certainly' and she told me that 22 years ago, they spent their honeymoon camping right at that place. Five years ago they separated and now they had remarried and wanted to spend their second honeymoon where their first one was spent." Mildly romantic, of course, but standing there in the woods, it impressed me no end.

Just a Little Dream of a Wood's Paradise

HEIGHO! AND WHAT'S everyone thinking of this Monday August morning? "Blue Monday", some of the gang call it, for it means Sunday's vacation is over and back to the galleys and the grind. As we sit here looking at the erstwhile white keys of the battered old Remington, now soiled by the taps of many perspiring fingers, we're thinking of the pines of Speculator. That's that beauty spot on the shores of Lake Pleasant high up in the Adirondacks where Max Schmeling, former world's heavyweight champion, hits the trail for, tomorrow, to start the training grind for the big battle with Mickey Walker, under the joint auspices of the Madison Square Garden Corporation and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's great Milk Fund. Joe Jacobs thinks Speculator will be a lucky spot for the Teuton Schlager. Perhaps it will be. It was there that Gene Tunney trained for both fights for Jack Dempsey, and if winning the world's heavyweight championship and getting a couple of million dollars along with it, isn't lucky, what is?

THE KEYBOARD of the old Remington fades as we write and again we're sitting on the shores of Lake Pleasant along with Gene Tunney. Gene is elucidating on Shakespeare or the Einstein theory or something or other. But we are watching the sun dip behind the purple peaks and wondering if tomorrow morning we can paddle up Congamunk Creek and get another look at the beavers. These beavers proved more interesting than the world's champion to us. We had seen and known so many ring champions, Sullivan, Fitz, Corbett, Jeff, right up the line to Johnson, Willard and Dempsey. But until we came to Speculator we never had seen a beaver. Even in our sojourns with the bear, the moose and the lynx in Canada we never had met up with the little water animal that once upon a time inhabited almost every river, brook and stream in America, but since had become practically extinct. The beavers came back to the Adirondacks a year or so before Tunney's first fight with Dempsey. One morning with "Pants" Lawrence, the guide, we paddled up the Congamunk and watched them at work.

MANY MORNINGS thereafter, and sometimes the hush of the evening, as the Irish say—and isn't it a colorful, eerie expression?—found us sitting silent, motionless in the canoe screened by the birches, watching, studying these beavers. There was something fascinating, intriguing about their work, felling the birch sapplings so they would fall just right, dragging the trees into position before the dam, chinking and cementing up the crevices with mud with their broad, flat tails like a mason with his trowel and cement. We believe there is a sort of a telepathy among woods creatures that tells them whether an onlooker is friend or foe. Anyway before the altogether too short stay at Speculator was over and we had to return to the heat and smells of the big city, we did not have to trouble ourself in hiding from the beaver. They would see us and go working along uncaring. One old beaver in particular used to amuse us. He was the watchman. He used to squat on his haunches on a hummock, surveying in all directions and sniffing into the wind. He would dig under his arm pits for fleas with one paw and scratch his fat paunch with the other, with such an expression of mingled annoyance and resignation on his buck-toothed face that we couldn't help laughing out loud. When disturbed the watchman would dive into the water with a slap of his tail and in a twinkling of an eye not a beaver was in sight. But if you remained still, silent, and motionless back they would come again in a few moments.

TUNNEY'S TRAINING routine gave us plenty of time to spend in our favorite woods and waters. Gene generally kept in seclusion until a half hour before his boxing and reserved an hour for the newspapermen at night. We had to file only one story a day. The rest of the time we could wander at will. And wander we did for miles around those Adirondack hillsides, which the brown pines, row on row and rank on rank, march down to bathe their feet in the turquoise waters of Lake Pleasant. We found the places where the deer came down to drink in the flush of the morning and at evening time, saw their favorite bedding places, watched the red does and the little long legged, big eared, spotted fawns and the family raisings.

MAX SCHMELING WILL like Speculator. The ex-heavyweight champion is a hunter. He has a big preserve in Germany, we are told, where he hunts deer and wild bear and lives like an aristocrat. He can't do any hunting in Speculator for the shooting season is not yet on. But if he is a real sportsman he will get just as much fun watching and studying the game. Sometime, we hope, he will feel that killing for killing's sake alone is no sport and that it is heaps more fun "shooting" for the fur and feathered creatures with a camera and letting them live and love and work and play as the good God above meant them to do. It takes ten times as much skill to "shoot" a deer with a camera, as it does with a rifle or shotgun. You have the picture and the deer has its life. Did you ever shoot a dear and come upon it dying? We shot our last one long ago, and for a long time the sight of that dying creature, looking at us with big, round, accusing eyes, remained with us. We decided then and there that unless hunger or necessity forced us, we never again would kill a fur or feathered creature, and we have lived up to it. Somehow or other our conscience suffers no twinge when we land a fish. They are too cold, clammy it seems, to have the usual animal feelings.

YES, THAT'S AN ideal training camp they have picked out for Max Schmeling to tune up in for his Milk Fund battle with Mickey Walker. It is high up in the Adirondacks where the air is wonderfully cool and invigorating. In the hottest days of the summer there is never a night at Speculator when you don't feel the need of a blanket. Days may be hot, but the nights invariably are cool. A country of blue hills, blue waters, brown woods and green meadows. Say, folks after the heat of the last few days can't you excuse us for this little dream of the pines of Speculator?

BRAVES FALL TO 6TH PLACE WHILE IDLE

Pittsburgh, Aug. 29. The Pirates were very happy and the Braves were very sad as they resumed hostilities in the second of their four-game series, here, this afternoon, after a day off.

It was the Sabbath vacation that caused the Bucc's joy and the Warriors' grief.

CARDS RISE ABOVE TRIBE

While the Pennsylvania blue laws were keeping the rivals idle, the natives climbed into second place over the Dodgers, who were whipped twice by the Cards, and the Mound City outfit, by their double victory, climbed into fifth place over the visitors.

Still, there are only four games separating the Corsairs and the Tribesmen and Bill McKechnie, enemy pilot, firmly believes that his charges will finish up in the berth now occupied by the Gibson nine.

And Bill further believes that his hired hands will start their upward march this very afternoon, when Bobby Brown, his rookie right-hander with the blinding speed, goes to the hill against Ray Kremer, Buccs' veteran.

BROWN SEEKS 12th WIN

Brown, a Greater Boston boy who is serving his first full season in the majors, has already won 11 games, which is more than a few for a rookie.

Bobby, too, enjoys the distinction of being the last hurler to whip the Chicago Cubs, who have won their last ten games. He handed the pace-setters the only setback they have suffered during their present home stand.

YANKS NEED 18 MORE WINS TO CLINCH FLAG

If you're interested in mathematical possibilities, the New York Yankees can clinch the American League flag with 18 more victories while the Chicago Cubs need 22 to assure themselves of the National League pennant.

Here's how the leaders in each circuit stood today.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Club	Won	Lost	To Play
Yankees	88	38	28
Athletics	78	49	27
Senators	71	54	29

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Club	Won	Lost	To Play
Cubs	73	51	30
Pirates	66	60	28
Dodgers	67	62	25

SENATORS ELIMINATED

Thus the Yankees, by winning 18 of their remaining games, can clinch the pennant regardless of what Philadelphia accomplishes. Washington is in an even more dangerous position, for the Senators automatically will be eliminated as soon as the Yankees win 13 games.

In the National League Pittsburgh could win all of its remaining games and still finish no better than second if the Cubs can take 22 decisions. Brooklyn will be eliminated as soon as the Cubs win 20 games. It might be remembered too that each time their closest rivals are beaten the Cubs and Yankees will need one fewer victory to clinch.

Bob Carey Sets Up New World's Record

Winchester, Ind., Aug. 28 (AP)—Bob Carey, of Anderson, Ind., today established a new world record of :22.58 in driving his motor racer one-half mile over the dirt speedway here.

The former mark, 22.90, was established on the same track by Maurie Rose, of Dayton, O., July 23, 1931.

OUIMET'S UNDERSTUDY

If "an army is as strong as its reserves" holds good in the Walker Cup matches this week, Francis Ouimet's team should do all right. Here's Gus Moreland (above), the Texas Tarzan who last week won the Western Amateur title from one of the strongest fields in history. He's getting the lay of the land at the Country Club today.

So What?

—By JOE MOONEY—

There's a little of the gambler in us all. Even President Hoover wants to make a six way parlay on the unemployment situation.

It's a long shot, but look at the pay off. Ten million jobs to one.

And it's a sure way to get the embattled farmer's vote. He's been a short ender all his life.

Race track technique with politicians is an old story. Wall Street has been keeping a Dutch book on the boys for years.

The way to get out the vote is to put the election on the mutuel machines. Then if you pick a winner, you get your poll tax back.

Today's best bets — Norman Thomas to show.

JAPAN BIDS FOR TOLAN

New York, Aug. 29 (US)—Japan wants Eddie Tolan to coach its Olympic runners. Shortly after he won both sprinting races in the Olympic games, Tolan, a young Negro graduate of the University of Michigan, received two offers.

One was in the form of an invitation to tour Japan and race. The other was to spend all or part of the next four years in coaching the Nipponese athletes.

Tolan's decision will be withheld for a while.

The Japanese looked over the American way of doing things at the Olympics and already plan to adopt American methods.

Ouimet Missing as Cup Teams Tune Up for Match

By BILL GRIMES

With the exceptions of Capt. Francis Ouimet and Gus Moreland, the American Walker Cup team has reported to the squad headquarters at the Hotel Beaconsfield and the group went to The Country Club early this morning for its initial workout.

Francis Ouimet will be with his team tomorrow and Moreland, who left Chicago yesterday noon, is expected late this afternoon.

Ouimet has recovered rapidly from the effects of a bad cold, but his ability to play really will be uncertain until he tries a practice round.

George T. Dunlap, the former intercollegiate champion, has been here for almost a week. George Voigt and Maurice McCarthy yesterday arrived from New York; Charlie Seaver, the pride of California; Don Moe, from Portland, Ore., and Jack Westland, came in from Chicago; Harrison Jimmy Johnston, from St. Paul, and Billy Howell from Virginia.

With only three days remaining before the start of the Walker Cup matches, the American squad has none too much time to familiarize itself with The Country Club course. And moreover with the exception of Capt. Ouimet, Jimmie Johnston and Jesse Sweetser, the Americans are as strange to the Brookline layout as the Britons were a week ago.

COURSE TOUGHENED

For the coming Walker Cup matches, the course has been toughened. The rough, which is matty, has been allowed to grow in on practically every fairway and the openings to some of the greens are very narrow. The 14th hole promises to be troublesome. It is a par 5 and a combination of No. 3 of the Primrose course and No. 1 Squirrel. The 9th green of Primrose has been allowed to grow and during the international team matches balls will be played from this surface.

For a week, the Englishmen have been practicing daily at the Country Club and despite the fact that they have not been putting well they have had some remarkably low rounds. John Burke has been the outstanding player but during the more recent rounds Rex Hartley has begun to forge to the front. Of course, practice rounds are of little value for comparisons but they tend to build up confidence, providing the players are scoring well.

BRITONS WORK HARD

The Englishmen devoted from four to six hours daily to playing and practise last week. Apparently, they did not mind the terrific heat, but it is possible that they will feel the effects of their strenuous work this week. Also, they have played so much golf since they arrived that they may go stale before they tackle the Americans.

Until Francis Ouimet reports, Jesse Sweetser will be in charge of the American team. Sweetser has not been in good health of late and it is doubtful if he will play as frequently as his mates.

ERNIE SCHAAF, MAX BAER TOP FISTIC CARD

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—A half dozen of the world's leading heavyweights, veterans and youngsters, bounce boxing back into a leading position on the nation's sports pages this week.

The most important bout of all pits Ernie Schaaf, Boston contender, against Max Baer, husky Californian who has learned much since he dropped a decision to Schaaf in Madison Square Garden here 19 months ago. Their second battle, another 10 round affair, will be held in the Chicago Stadium Wednesday night.

STOPPED SANTA

Since that first disastrous eastern tour in the last month of 1930 and the early months of 1931, Baer has won two decisions over King Levinsky, one over Tom Heeney and Johnny Risko and knocked out the huge Portuguese, Jose Santa.

Schaaf has dropped two decisions only to Tommy Loughran and Stanley Poreda in the last two years or more and probably will be favored in the betting.

Levinsky meets Risko in another important clash at Cleveland Thursday night with the route set for 12 rounds. Levinsky should be a heavy favorite, but the veteran Clevelander is an annoying foe when he has one of his good rights.

PRIMO PICKS LASKY

Primo Carnera will face Art Lasky of Minneapolis in a 10-rounder at St. Paul on Thursday and on the same night at the Queensboro Stadium, New York, Isadore Gastanaga, latest Spanish sensation, tackles Hans Birkie, Oakland, Cal., heavyweight.

Among the light heavyweights, Maxie Rosenbloom, recognized as 175-pound champion in New York and other states, will meet Bob Godwin, Georgia youngster, in a 10-round non-title match at Charlotte, N. C., tomorrow night.

The Tip Is Gar Wood.

A Very Lucky Lady—

Dean Is Not Too Dizzy.
Cagle Back From Coast.
Herr Moxie In and Out.

ITEMS FROM BURLESQUE BOULEVARD.

My outside man in Detroit reports that Kaye Don won't know which way Gar Wood's boat went. O Kaye, Detroit . . . Max Carey's Brooklyn Robins scored a moral victory in the late "crucial" series with the Cubs—they got out of Chicago with their watches . . . Before the seres I thought I saw a picture in the American of Hack Wilson with a couple of bats in his arms, but it must have been trick photography . . . Landis claims the Cubs play the horses, and if the horses were smart they'd play the Cubs . . . Whatever became of Raggedy Pants, anyhow? . . . We haven't heard much from the Judge since that one finished up at the eighth pole . . .

Noted in my favorite haunt on two fair to middling air pilots—Colonel Eddie Rickenbacker and Captain James Mollison. And while they were there what does a lady do but walk into the place and hit four jack pots in a row in those slot machines. The total winnings were something like $110. I didn't get the lady's name, but I'd like to have her about where I could touch her now and then (not, you understand, for the $110, but actually touch her like one touches a hunchback for luck), because she positively must be Lady Luck in person . . . Colonel William Applegate, a master hand with figures, tried to figure out the odds against her remarkable streak, but gave it up when he got a trillion to one . . .

. . . Speaking of gambling devices, it was Arthur Joyce who pointed out in a novelty store window the three little shells and pea that used to enliven the country fair, together with full instructions about how to use them. What better equipment could an ambitious young man starting out in life ask? . . .

. . . It does, however, give you an idea of what Broadway has come to. Coney Island before the big fire had nothing on it. And as for the displays outside the theatres it occurs to me that there are too many thighs on display even on the basis of Art for Art's sake. Some visitors to our town might prefer white meat . . .

Ben Bernie, the Old Maestro, got three different wires on three different horses in a five-horse race at Saratoga and wound up beating the heat when two of them ran one-two . . . Then he turned around and sprayed the lay-out on young Alfred Vanderbilt's Sue Jones in the last to win enough to keep his entire band through the Winter . . . Not that they will need it. Bernie going big these days as an entertainer by air, land and water . . .

. . . The only thing dizzy about that Dizzy Dean, of the Cardinals, is the official scorer who tries to keep track of him . . . In three games in the Giant series Diz was in them all, winning two . . . I believe it was the fifth time he had hung it on the Giants this year . . . We warned you long ago that this fellow was destined to make a great pitcher, and some day, barring accident, he can't miss being one of the best . . . But wait until you get a load of his kid brother . . . He really can pitch . . .

The Boston Club and the New York Football Giants are tiffing over the contract of Ernie Pinckert, the great blocking back from Southern Cal. Lud Wray claims he promised to play for Boston, but Steven Owen just showed me a signed contract from him, and there you are . . .

Chris Cagle, back from helping to make a movie in Hollywood, says he knows now why they call 'em moving picture actors—because the directors never give them any rest . . . "It's worse than being a Plebe at West Point," says Chris. "One morning they dragged me out of bed at dawn, and I got back into the hay the following morning at 1 a. m. That's what you might call playing football night and day for a living. But it did do one thing. It put me in great shape for the coming professional season." . . .

Herr Max Schmeling was in our jolly midst before setting forth for Speculator, N. Y., by airplane to begin training for his fight with Mickey Walker on Sept. 19 . . . You'd be surprised at the fight folks around town who think that Mickey is going to annoy Herr Max no end by getting in close and pummelling him around the middle. They say Schmeling doesn't enjoy them in there. But they always say that. Who does? . . . But what interests me more than the fight at the moment is whether Schmeling brought me that Dachshund. Schmeling, you know, has reversed that old saying about love me, love my dog. In his case it works out—Love my dog, love me. I do not wish to cast any unfair aspersions on my fellow sports writers, whom I esteem highly one and all and collectively and individually, but I couldn't help taking note that the more dogs they had got from Schmeling the further off they thought he had beat Sharkey . . . And there were some cases where, if Max had brought over just one more dog the gentlemen wouldn't have been able to see Sharkey in the ring at all . . .

Well, he's a noble animal, the dog, and a great help to the harried columnist. Hasn't that old Missouri boy who made good in the big city, Odd McIntyre, parlayed two Sealyhams into a couple of apartment houses on Park Ave.? . . .

It's got to the place where even Jake Ruppert is beginning to realize that the Yankees have a fair chance for the American League pennant. Also the Colonel's Newark Bears in the International League, where the capable George Weiss has done such yeomen and efficient service this year . . . Yep, Colonel, it does look as though both teams have got a fighting chance . . . Haul it out of here, Harold.

HOSE GIVING CUSTOMERS REAL BREAK

By JOE CASHMAN

This is the leanest week of the local baseball season. Our never-say-die Red Sox play single games with the Cleveland Indians today and tomorrow. After that there'll be nothing doing until the Braves return Saturday.

When the Sox opened their current home stand, few knew and fewer cared how long it would be ere they departed once more.

Now, everybody you meet is weeping copious tears over the fact that the Fenway flock is leaving and will not be seen hereabouts again until the final week of the campaign.

From which you might gather that Bold Martin and his lads have been entertaining the girls and boys who pay the freight in a truly superlative fashion. And if you do, you gather correctly.

SOX PROVIDE THRILLS

No championship team ever staged in a whole season more thrill-packed baseball dramas for the clientele than have the Red Sox in the past three weeks.

As far as winning and losing is concerned, they have captured ten out of 19 games. If they can take one of the two remaining games with the Indians, they will have turned in the best record for a long home stand of either local club this season.

It isn't, however, their winning percentage but the manner in which they have compiled it that has set the fans daffy.

INDIANS TAKE FIRST

Take Sunday's second game with the Indians for example. The first tilt was a Cleveland parade to the tune of 10 to 1. The first five innings of the nightcap was scoreless, with Ivy Paul Andrews allowing only two hits and Clint Brown but three.

In the sixth, the Sox bunched two hits for a run. With one gone in the seventh, Averill hit a line-drive to right. It should have been a routine out but Stumpf lost the ball in the sun and it went for a double. Cissell followed with a single and the score was tied.

It remained so until the ninth was over, necessitating overtime in a game that Andrews should have won 1 to 0.

Having beaten the Indians only once before in 15 starts this season, the natives had every reason to feel they didn't have a chance and throw in the sponge now. It seemed certain they had, too, when the visitors put over two tallies and drove Ivy Paul out in the tenth.

But sponges, towels and all other tokens of defeat are taboo in Marty McManus' presence. "Two runs," said the manager and his boys, "that's easy."

It was. Hits by Tate, Johnson, McManus and Stumpf, and the score was tied again.

DURHAM ESCAPES

Durham picked up the mound burden proceeded to put runners on first and third with only one gone and then pulled himself out of the hole.

Then the last of the 11th. Tate was up. He was dog tired. It was supposed to be his day off after catching all week, but he had to start work in the second inning of the opener when Connolly talked out of turn and was banished.

Benny brought the count off Sarge Connolly down to 3 and 2 and spanked the next pitch into the rightfield stands for a home run.

In his first eight years in the big show, Benny hit just two home runs. In the last four days he has hit two for the Sox and each won a game.

Tate's feat was no mistake. All the Sox have been coming through like that of late.

Only Saturday they spotted the White Sox a five-run lead and beat them out. Against Detroit, they won a game with two gone in the ninth. Against the Browns, they overcame a one-run lead in the 11th, a three-run lead in the 14th and won in the 15th.

This writer failed to become unduly enthused over a post-season city seires when the Sox first suggested it to him. He didn't think it would click financially.

He has different ideas today. It ought to be a whale of an engagement from a baseball standpoint and the Sox by their great work of late have created enough late-season enthusiasm to make it a financial success.

CLOVER IN CLOVER

1½ LBS.
7½ LBS.

"Never get fresh with the mailman, 'cause he won't deliver your mail—" according to the old song. But apparently this small-mouthed, square-tailed black bass had never been warned. Because he grabbed Francis J. Clover's shiner and wound up in the Evening American's sports department, where everyone, including Mr. FishandGame Brooks, was properly impressed. That little fellow on the left is the average sized bass. Which gives you an idea.

COBB HERE FOR SIGMORE FRAY AT FENWAY

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Walter Cobb, who busted in two of Primo Carnera's ribs while acting as a sock absorber for the Italian hulk, will arrive in town today to finish training for his bout tomorrow night at Fenway Park with Jack Sigmore.

Eddie Mack brings Cobb here on his first appearance in the Hub with the hopes that he will stir up a little interest, not to mention a few customers.

And Cobb probably will. The big boy is said to be able to punch his way out of a steel vault.

Sigmore, the over-sized colored scrapper from Cambridge, is quite a fighter himself with a lethal punch and speed, but shy experience.

And while the Cobb-Sigmore engagement is expected to provide the loudest noises it wouldn't be at all surprising to see the Al Grayson-Ricardo Bertozzola skirmish take a place all by itself.

Another bout on the program finds Johnny Dixon, former B. C. football captain, in against an old nemesis, Eddie Callahan.

Five six-round bouts are on tap under the promotion of Sam Price at the North st. rink in Salem tonight. Stonewall Jackson vs. Johnny Walker, Frank Monte vs. Joe Wright, Harrison Allen vs. "Irish" Bob Neary, Walter Rocheville vs. Ernest Tettoni and Steve Chappie vs. Johnny Mack are the battles listed.

Alex McLean has another wrestling show at Revere tomorrow night which will take place at the Rollaway Rink. Scotty Dakins meets Harry Cornsweet in the main tussle.

Clover Takes Record 7 1-2 Lb. Bass

Just to prove it wasn't a fish story, Francis J. Clover of No. 35 Vassal lane, Cambridge, paraded into this office with a seven and a half pound small-mouthed black bass. The bass was nearly two feet long, and was caught at Lake Ossipee, which is just outside of Center Ossipee, N. H.

Clover spent the week-end at "Camp Brokenback," which is on the shore of Lake Ossipee. He ventured forth in a skiff in the hope of catching ordinary sized bass. He baited his line with a big, live shiner. When he hooked his prize bass, it jumped three feet out of the water. Clover was indeed "in clover" when he landed the big fish after playing it for almost an hour.

Game Warden Robertson told Clover there wasn't such a big bass in Lake Ossipee. Clover then showed his catch and Robertson took the count.

What the Stars Did

By The Associated Press

Babe Ruth, Yankees—Pounded White Sox pitching for 38th and 39th homers and two singles in double-header, driving in five runs.

Paul Derringer and Dizzy Dean, Cardinals—Pitched champions to double victory over Dodgers.

Chick Hafey, Reds—His eighth inning single drove in winning run against Phillies.

Hazen Cuyler, Cubs—Drove in four of Cubs' five runs, including winning marker, against Giants.

Jonathan Stone, Tigers—His double and three singles accounted for six runs against Senators.

MICHELSON WINNER OF MARATHON

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Juan Zabala, the much heralded Olympic Marathon victor, succumbed to blistered feet—or was it ennui or a fit of Latin temperament?—in the international Marathon at Rockingham yesterday, and along came your old pals, Whitey Michelson and Clarence DeMar, both of whom have been running since Hector was a pup, to steal the show.

After seeing Zabala, Jimmy Henigan, last year's Boston marathon winner, and Clyde Martag, Baltimore boy, who won the Washington Marathon last Saturday, all drop out at different stages of the race, Michelson, despite a cramp that at one stage of the race forced him to lose much valuable ground, came on and pulled down what looked like a commanding lead of Johnny Semple, the Scotchman from Lynn, raced to the fore and opened up a good half mile gap on Semple to win in the rather ordinary time of 2:50:19.

ZABALA IN LEAD

Laboring far in the wake of Semple came Clarence DeMar, the tried and true veteran of many Marathon trails, who despite the fact he was running Marathons when most of his rivals were in their swaddling clothes, had enough of his old heart and stamina to finish third.

The big field of close to 100 runners went away from the bar like a pack of hounds in full cry. The little Argentinian took almost immediate command and raced along at a blazing clip with Johnny Kelly of the North Medford A. A. hanging like a shadow on his flanks.

Even Kelly had to let go and by the eighth mile the Argentinian was three quarters of a mile in front. He came back a bit in the next few miles and at the twelfth mile came to a sudden halt.

With Zabala out of it the real race started. Michelson had moved in to second position on the 8th mile. He was still holding in when Zabala quit at 12 miles. But hanging on his haunches was Jimmy Henigan and just after the 14 mile mark was passed. Jimmy moved up and passed Whitey. Henigan only blazed the trail for half a mile. Johnny Semple then wrested the lead away from Jimmy.

HENIGAN STOPS

Johnny continued to break trail on the 15th, 16th and 17th mile. At 17 miles Henigan had drifted 150 yards in Semple's wake and Michelson, who because of a cramp had lost a good ½ mile, seemed out of it. But Michelson got going again and when Henigan quit on the 18th mile Whitey took second place and started in to cut down Semple's lead.

At 20 miles Semple still was breaking trail but Michelson was coming strong and was less than 300 yards in his wake. At 21 miles Michelson had closed the gap between him and Semple to 150 yards. A third of a mile past the 21 mile post the sandy haired Dane moved into the lead.

Once passed and shaken off by Michelson, Semple seemed to lose heart and ambition. He let Michelson race away and seemed to concentrate only on holding second position.

Olympic City Now Village of Ghosts

Los Angeles, Aug. 29 (AP)—The Olympic village takes its place among California's ghost towns today.

At noon the New Zealand team of the 10th Olympiad, one of the first to arrive, will depart for the land down under—the last stragglers of that army of almost 2000 athletes who, a few short weeks ago, breathed life into the city of champions.

The 500 cottages which housed world champions and near champions, are being sold. Some are being transported to Japan, as monuments to the Nipponese stars; ohers will go to Denmark, but most of them will be scattered along the beaches and through the mounain resorts of Souhern California for summer homes.

YANKEE PILOT REFUSES TO COUNT EGGS

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Aug. 29 (INS)—Joe McCarthy, just a cheerful little tearful from out around Grant's tomb, not only reasserted stoutly his announced belief this morning that the Yankees have not won the American League pennant, but did more.

He was even able, with the Yanks 10½ games up and only 28 to play, to lose it for them. And while, in fancy, the Philadelphia Athletics came on to win in a bitter, heart breaking stretch-run, his own club, a victim of blind, unreasoning panic, he brought out the interesting fact that, although the Yankees won 18 of their last 20 games previous to yesterday's double-header they had gained only one game.

GLOOMY GUS SPEAKING

"I'd be a dolt," said he, not unreasonably, "to try to take what I haven't got. I had the Cubs up there several times. And what happened? They blew.

And when a club starts to blow, no power on earth can stop it, everybody tells me we're 'in.' But I notice that contending clubs don't admit it. We played .900 baseball through the last 20 games and still don't gain."

He was reminded that Mr. Cornelius Mack, the—er—yes, quite so, the towering tactician, had already conceded the pennant to the Yankees and he denied, point-blank, that this was so.

He was confronted with the fact that the Athletics have all they can do to hold second place and he said, inconsistently enough:

"They're in. They can't miss."

WALSH ON SOAP BOX

So, by using the Mr. Joe McCarthy system of deduction, I'm able to announce exclusively this morning that the Athletics, who are six games into second place, can't go wrong and that the Yankees, who are 1½ games into the pennant, can and undoubtedly will.

This, in fact, is probably the reason he has signed a contract with a syndicate to write his own, his personal and intimate picture of the 1932 world series from the steps of the dugout.

CHICAGO CUTS GRID PRICES

Chicago, Aug. 29 (INS)—Establishing the lowest football admission price in the country, announcement was made by the University of Chicago today that season tickets to the six games to be played at Stagg Field this fall will sell for $5.

This represents an average admission price of 84 cents to each home game, lowest in the history of the western conference. Proportionate reductions have also been made in single games admission prices.

EVANS IS BIG ASSET TO INDIANS

By RILEY GRANNON

Cleveland's Indians are the best or worst publicized ball tossers in the majors, depending upon the source of the ballyhoo.

When Manager Roger Peckinpaugh is entrusted with the job of keeping his boys in the public eye, little is heard or known of any of the Forest City athletics.

Wes Ferrell, Earl Averill and a few more of the club's outstanding performers occasionally steal a headline, but that's not because but in spite of their pilot.

Peck is a gentleman and a capable manager. He's liked and respected by his charges. But either he doesn't understand the value of publicity or he's totally ignorant as to how to get any.

EVANS GREAT PRESS AGENT

Occasionally, though, Billy Evans, former ace of the American League umpires and now business manager of the Cleveland entry, accompanies the club, and immediately the Indians break into print with a bang.

Evans is a master press agent. The scribes don't have to look for him. He looks for them. He knows what they want to hear and he makes sure they hear it.

He's honest, frank, interesting and entertaining. His personality is such that he could convince one that the moon is made of green cheese, but he never tries it. He hits straight from the shoulder, answers every query to the best of his ability and at the conclusion of every interview he invariably has made another booster for the Cleveland club.

He's in Boston now with the team for the first time in five years.

INDIANS TOO YOUNG

"Why have the Indians, in the first division for the past three seasons, been unable to improve enough to make a serious pennant bid?" we asked him.

"Principally because of the youth of the club. Willis Hudlin, oldest of the pitchers, is only 26. Many of the fielders are youngsters. Consequently, they are inclined to get the jitters occasionally and fall into slumps. One or two bad slumps have wrecked the Indians in this race. In a year or so, the Peckmen should have acquired the experience and poise to win out, was the answer.

Did Billy know anything about the reported sale of Wes Ferrell for Vernon Gomez?

FERRELL YARN UNFOUNDED

He didn't. He couldn't see why either the Indians or Yanks would want to trade a star for a star. He had heard the rumors that Ferrell wasn't in the good graces of the Cleveland management, but there is no truth to such stories.

Billy was loud in his praise of Orin Hildebrandt, rookie righthander of the Indians.

"Hildy has been playing pro ball less than two years," he said, "and there are few better pitchers in the circuit today. A little more seasoning and he'll be up there in the class with Ferrell and Gomez.

ANDREWS CAPABLE

"This Andrews of the Red Sox is still another most promising prospect. We tried to buy him. Offered $15,000 for him. The Yanks bid $20,000 and won.

"The Yanks are a thorn in the side of all rivals seeking to build up. They'll outbid you for every likely looking youngster they happen to be interested in.

"It doesn't make any difference how much money you may have to spend. If they want a player, they'll offer far more than you know he is worth and make you quit."

Evans declares that a desire to make a tour of the circuit is the sole reason for his presence here. But if he isn't travelling to boost the popularity of the Indians on the trials, he certainly is doing that little thing to perfection.

B. C. SQUAD BLOWS LID OFF '32 SEASON TODAY

LIGHT DRILLS ON FOOTBALL PROGRAM

Special to the American

Jackson, N. H., Aug. 29—Rarin' to go after a night's rest in this cool mountain climate, the Boston College squad reported to Head Coach Joe McKenney this morning and the 1932 football season was officially opened.

Upon their arrival late yesterday afternoon, the Maroon and Gold squad, including 34 players, Coaches McKenney, Bill Ormsby and Harry Downes and Trainer Frank Jones, retired to Joe McHugh's camp. After a hearty dinner, the squad was soon ready for bed as the long, hot bus and auto ride had taken its toll.

TWO WORKOUTS A DAY

Coach McKenney called his gridsters together early this morning and devoted an hour to explaining his plans for the coming season. He announced that there would be workouts here each day for a fortnight and that he expected every man to be in prime condition when he returned to the Heights.

After his opening address, McKenney held a short blackboard talk and then the squad trotted to the improvised gridiron.

The morning practise was confined to passing and punting by the backs with the linesmen going through some limbering up exercises, under Harry Downes, the All American center who joined McKenney's staff this season.

PLAYERS ARE FIT

Judging from the fine coats of tan which adorn every player on the B. C. squad the players are all in fine condition and after a week of ground work will be ready for scrimmaging.

As the Maroon and Gold has started practise about two weeks earlier than last year, Coach McKenney will be able to take the squad along in stride but there will be plenty of body contact before the squad breaks camp and returns to Boston.

104 STARS SEEK CREAVY CROWN

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 29 (INS)—Including some of the nation's most brilliant stars, 104 links performers today were ready to march onto the Keller golf course tomorrow to plunge into the annual battle for the Professional Golfers Association championship.

Defending his title, Tom Creavy of Albany, N. Y., confronts fierce competition in this year's tournament.

Among the rivals who seek to dethrone the youthful champion are Walter Hagen, who has held the P. G. A. crown five times; Horton Smith, last year's winner of the St. Paul open; Harry Cooper, 1930 St. Paul open champion; Billy Burke, United States open champion last year, and Tommy Armour, last year's British open titleholder.

Fish and Game

—By WIN BROOKS—

The tinker mackerel are in Hingham harbor and some good catches are reported on rod and reel, some being taken on streamflies. The seals are also in in large numbers and may drive the fish out.

That abundance of smelts reported off Hough's Neck must have graced somebody's frying pan by now because they've vanished.

* *

A quartet of Hingham anglers are back home after a seven-day quest on Bill Rice's 40-foot cabin cruiser, Mashantam, after deep sea game fish. Rice, Jack Whitney the shipbuilder, Robert Foote and Herbert Hand made the trip. They had hopes of swordfish and tuna but the hopes failed of realization. They did take many bluefish on the Jap feathers and returned with 28 big ones, all about eight pounds.

* *

Bluefish, incidentally, are being taken in as far as Wing's Neck, in Buzzards Bay, the farthest inshore they have been since the construction of the Cape Cod canal. The flow of cold Massachusetts Bay water through the canal was believed to have driven them out but Massachusetts bay water still flows through the canal and it is just as cold as ever.

* * *

Successful bluefisherman in the vicinity of Pocasset include William M. Zoller, of west Newton, Fred C. Alexander of Newtonville, Merton E. Packard, Ben Ryder and Ernest A. Burrill, all of Brockton, and Theodore Spencer, of Winchester and Levi Holmes of Raynham. Holmes got a six pounder and Ryder one that weighed a little more.

MAX OFF FOR CAMP TODAY

New York, Aug 29—Max Schmeling leaves today for Speculator to begin his training for Mickey Walker. If the weather is good he'll get away by seaplane from 96th st. about 11 in the morning; if bad he'll take the more prosaic route by train and car.

The plane trip is less than two hours.

Sparring partners preceded him yesterday when Mushky Jackson took the first load of prime beef to the camp—Chester Matan, Lou Barba, Joe Banavic and Jack Shaw.

Billy McCarney has been in the mountains preparing the camp and Max's regular retinue of attendants have the home fires burning awaiting his coming.

LADYSMAN, HAPPY GAL VIE FOR HONORS

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—With two of the turfs richest juvenile races down for decision within the next three weeks, the battle for supremacy in the two-year-old division has narrowed to a private duel between W. R. Coe's Ladyman and William Woodward's Happy Gal.

Happy Gal, one down in three arguments at Saratoga with Ladysman, will have an opportunity to square accounts when they meet in the $40,000 hopeful on Saturday.

Two weeks later, Sept. 17, comes the $100,000 futurity, richest of all American races, at Belmont. Both title contenders are eligible for this classic.

WIN TWO BIG RACES

Ladysman, a son of the famous Pompey, conquered the Woodward filly, a daughter of Sir Gallahad, 3d, in the United States Hotel stakes and then ramped away with the decision in the Grand Union Hotel stakes last Saturday.

Happy Gal's victory came in the Saratoga Special in which Ladysman trailed by one and one-half lengths.

Financially, the Coe speedster also holds the edge. With a victory in the rich Arlington Park Futurity to boost his earnings, he won $59,635.

Happy Gal, winner of the Juvenile and Flash Handicap in addicap to the Spa Spevial, has put $30,525 into her owner's pocket.

HAS WON $50,000

If Ladysman follows in the footsteps of his daddy, he will carry off honors in the Hopeful and Belmont futurity. Pompey turned the trick in both events in 1925 after winning the United States Hotel stakes and losing in the Saratoga Special.

TITLE ROAD TOUGH FOR WALCOTT

(This is the fourth of a series dealing with the ring career of Joe Wolcott, the Barbadoes Demon).

By JOE MOONEY

CHAPTER 4

Joe Walcott left Boston after the fifteen round draw with Mysterious Billy Smith to seek richer fields in New York and the west. He fought frequently an dwell, but the richness of the next five years was confined chiefly to experience and the broadening that comes from travel.

Walcott and the coin of the realm remained only slight acacquaintances up to the time he won the welterweight championship of the world from Rube Ferns at Fort Erie, Ontario, 1901.

When Joe climbed through the hemp strands of the Seaside A. C. to dispose of one Mick Dunn in eight rounds, it was the Barbados Demon's first official appearance before a New York audience. Actually, Walcott had been in New York before under circumstances far less important.

DIXON FETE AT BAR

The night that George Dixon won the championship of the world from Fred Johnson, in 1892, the victory celebration was held at "Brooklyn" Jimmy Carroll's training camp and bar. Every fighter of note at the time was present.

Tom O'Rourke, then manager of Dixon, was expanding on his acumen in securing the best fighters of the day. The conversation turned to the Boston crop, and some one asked O'Rourke about Walcott, word of whom was just then seeping into the big town.

"Do you want to see him?" asked O'Rourke. It opened a door leading to a back room. O'Rourke went to the bed in one corner and kicked it several times.

"Joe, Hey, Joe, Come out here."

A blanket shrouded form rolled out from under the bed. It was Walcott.

The Barbados Demon was brought out to the main saloon and O'Rourke put him through paces after the manner of some one selling a fine horse. Then Joe was allowed to retire. Under the bed, of coure. Not in it. Who did he think he was—a world's champion?

KAYOED O'BRIEN

Walcott's ring career in New York established him as the local boy who was bound to make good. He returned to Boston in 1896 just to stay long enough to belt poor Dick O'Brien into a coma in one round.

The Barbados Demon's first big shot was with Kid Lavigne at Maspeth, Long Island, Dec. 2, 1896. Walcott lost the decision in 15 rounds in a bout which offers an interesting study in managerial arrangements.

Lavigne, then one of the ranking welterweights of the country, fought Walcott only on the condition that if he, Lavigne, should last 15 rounds with the chunky Negro, he would automatically receive the decision.

KID STAYED ON FEET

So for fourteen of the fifteen rounds, Walcott didn't know if he was fighting or running a foot race with the Lavigne. The Kid was still on his feet after fifteen rounds, though breathing hard from the long run. For the first time Walcott learned that the road to the championship was paved with potential track stars.

Walcott was in the middle on most arrangements until he won the championship. When he fought, he invariably knocked his opponents dead. And knocking an oppenent dead merely made it that much harder to get another fight.

Tommy Ryan would have none of him. Likewise Horace Leeds, the British champion, begged to be excused. There followed, perforce, five years of barnstorming around the country for Walcot.

Still, the century ran out with Walcott apparently as far from the world's welterweight crown as ever.

It was 1901. Walcott was 29 years old. Rube Ferns ruled the welterweight roost, having won from Mysterious Billy Smith on a foul, and after dropping it once regained the crown from Matty Matthews.

Walcott was signed to meet Ferns at Fort Erie. The top of the mountain was in sight.

Lower Berth Satisfies Grimm

Chicago, Aug. 29 (INS)—When Charlie Grimm was merely a first baseman he roomed with his team mate, Riggs Stephenson.

But, when he was elevated to the managership of the Chicago Cubs, it was decreed that living alone was more befitting to the dignity of the higher post. With this decree he complied, but—dignity or no dignity—Charlie today declined to travel in a "high-falutin" style.

"I can understand," he explained "why it is best for a big league manager to room alone, but when we're on a train they won't make me take a drawing room.

"I'll do my sleeping in my old spot—lower seven."

RED HAIRED TEA GIRL FINED IN TIPSY BRAWL

Provincetown, Aug 29—Doris McLaughlin, red-haired tea-room proprietor whose night club, the Waterfront Club, was the art colony's "hot spot" last year until authorities closed it, was fined $10 for drunkenness today in district court.

The [illegible] beauty, who claims to be the daughter of a judge now deceased in Canton, was arrested Saturday at midnight on Long Wharf while engaged in an altercation with several men, according to testimony in court today.

Her screams attracted Patrolman Theodore [illegible], to whom she declared she was being pushed around by the men.

Patrolman [illegible] testified the men were sober when she was [illegible] and was pushing the men around. He arrested her and she spent the night in the town [illegible].

When Judge Welch imposed the fine the girl said:

"I haven't go that much money with me, but I can get it from my boy friend."

She went across the street to a lunch cart operated by W[illegible] Shepard, and he gave her $10 with which she paid the fine.

WALL STREET'S SMART MONEY BACKS HOOVER

By LOUIS SEIBOLD

New York, Aug. 29—Republican "gold diggers" soliciting funds among the "criminal rich" and "malefactors of great wealth" (copyrighted by Theodore Roosevelt the first) are developing a new technique.

Underwriting syndicates backed by corporation money are no longer in style. Only "individual contributions" are accepted. Donations bearing corporation taint are received only on the basis of "personal contributions."

The impression prevails in Wall Street that 90 per cent of the "smart money" political contributions will go into the Republican war chest in the remaining ten weeks of the campaign. It is not likely President Hoover will be compelled to make an appeal for popular subscriptions [illegible] Roosevelt did the other night.

"ALL FOR PROTECTION"

Of course, the gentlemen who minister the affairs of the great international and domestic finance, steel, oil, copper, power and manufacturing enterprises feel justified in supporting the Hoover candidacy to "uphold" the standards of American commerce.

The inspiration of this motive is ready to perpetuate the system of protection which "big business" always enjoys under Republican policies.

Roosevelt's courageous championship of the unprotected [illegible] has been most displeasing to the captains of industry. They may view his liberal program with [illegible] but are determined to set aside a goodly portion of their abnormal profits to keeping him out of the White House.

But with two or three vigilant congressional committees on the [illegible] Wall St. is preserving an outward semblance of political neutrality and resorting to devices [illegible] the hope of lending substantial aid to the Hoover cause.

"SYNDICATES" BANNED

For this and other reasons efforts to organize syndicates to underwrite the Hoover campaign such as found favor in the past are frowned upon.

Roosevelt Gets Cash From South

New York, Aug 29 (AP)—Response from the Middle West and the South to Gov. Roosevelt's appeal last week for campaign funds was evidenced today by approximately 1000 letters containing contributions.

The Friday and Saturday mail was all from the East and averaged $2 a letter, the total being a little over $4000. Today's letters came as far as Arkansas and Nebraska.

Ben Riley, treasurer of the association, asserted the Republicans are "playing both sides" on the prohibition issue and "can't be trusted to bring about reform as speedily as possible."

NORMAN BEGS FOR MORE TIME

London Jokers Twit Banker Norman About Disguises

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—Officials at the Foreign Office today disclaimed any knowledge of reports published in the United States that Montagu Norman, now in New York, is engaged in negotiations concerning war debts and tariffs.

About the only items printed in London regarding the governor of the Bank of England are in the humorous journals which twit him about his ineffective disguises. On this trip Mr. Norman traveled as "Professor Skinner" but there was no difficulty in penetrating that alias.

In American quarters here nothing was known of reports from the United States that Mr. Norman would return to London with Ambassador Mellon. It was said at the embassy that they might travel on the same liner but that nothing was known of any other arrangements.

to the Bank of England stated A THREE-YEAR EXTENSION OF THE WAR DEBTS MORATORIUM is considered essential if immediate cancellation is not achieved.

Special interest is attached to the scheduled meeting tomorrow of Premier Herriot of France and Home Secretary Samuel of Britain in the Channel Islands. At the meeting, it is believed they will discuss the economic conference and the proposed new Franco-American commercial agreement.

The impression which British financial circles endeavor to convey is that Norman is discussing the question of Britain resuming war debts payments in connection with the general problem of currency, commodity prices, and the gold standard, all of which will be considered at the economic conference.

Declaring that deflation and the rise of gold prices is threatening to lead "TO GENERAL REPUDIATION OF DEBTS through the obvious inability to pay by debtors and by debtor countries of all kinds," Winston Churchill, former chancellor of the exchequer, urges in the Sunday Pictorial:

The governments of the United States and Great Britain ought, through their agents the Federal Reserve Bank and the Bank of England to come to a definite conclusion that commodities must be revaluated up to a 1927 or 1928 level, and that thereafter sufficient currency must be available to provide a steady measure for prices.

The Sunday Chronicle states:

"The general idea (of Norman's visit) is to effect (Britain's) change over to gold in 1933 AFTER THE WAR DEBTS AND REPARATIONS QUESTIONS HAVE BEEN SETTLED and some steps taken to reduce world tariff barriers."

The Sunday Referee adds:

"Montagu Norman is seeking American help for a return to the gold standard by Britain. Help is desired in the form of a general rise in the prices of raw materials so that the new value of the gold pound can be set as high as possible and in this way avoid over-depreciation of pound deposits abroad as well as over-appreciation of British dollar debts.

Official Circles Silent on Motives of Norman

"In this connection, Mr. Norman wishes to ascertain the intentions of the United States on the question of war debts. In Paris, it is believed Mr. Norman is negotiating on the resumption of Britain's war debts payments. The French fear for the gentleman's agreement."

The gentlemen's agreement, part of the Lausanne reparations settlement, was an understanding between America's debtors that a settlement of war debts would not be sought by any one of them without the knowledge of the others. It provided for a settlement en bloc rather than a number of bilateral settlements with the United States.

No English public official nor any financial leader is willing to admit that Norman's secret visit to the United States under the alias of Professor Skinner has anything to do with American campaign methods, although it is generally admitted that British opinion is uniformly favorable to Hoover and under the conviction that further moratoriums and eventual debt cancellation is assured under a continued Hoover administration but would be extremely unlikely under Democratic government.

London Officially Denies Plan to Renew Credit

London, Aug 29 (INS)—Mystery surrounding the American visit of Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England, was heightened today when the British government stepped in and disclaimed a press report that he planned to negotiate for renewal of the $200,000,000 federal reserve bank credit.

British Press Association gave wide circulation to the report. A short while later, it cancelled the message as "entirely inaccurate" and expressed regret that it had been given publicity.

Management of the Press Association explained the story had been withdrawn after the government had officially pointed out that the report was false.

The following obviously inspired statement was then distributed to all London newspapers:

"In view of misleading reports emanating from New York concerning credits granted to the British treasury by the Federal Reserve Bank a year ago, it is desirable to point out that all sums drawn against the credit were finally repaid in April last.

"The suggestion that any portion has not been repaid is entirely false. There is not and has never been any intention to seek renewal of the credits or any portion thereof."

Following this disclaimer, London newspapers continued speculating on the purpose of Norman's visit. Explanations ranged from restoration of the gold standard to revision of the war debts and lowering of tariff barriers.

RECTOR FOUND DEAD ON BEACH AFTER SWIM

Prouts Neck, Me., Aug. 29 (AP)—The unclothed body of the Rev. Frank H. Simonds, 47, rector of the Grace Episcopal Church at White Plains, N. Y., and summer rector of St. James' chapel here, was found on the beach today about a half mile from the point where he was last seen yesterday.

His bathing suit was found yesterday afternoon soon after he left a group of friends to take a sun bath. Those acquainted with the clergyman said he often went in the ocean in the nude.

A medical examiner returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

The body was found face down on the sand where it had been washed up by the incoming tide.

Mr. Simonds was visiting Mrs. Clayton R. Caskey, also of White Plains, at her summer home here. He was to have officiated at services at the chapel at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

It was low tide when Mr. Simonds disappeared and authorities said it would have been necessary for him to have waded a long distance to find water deep enough for swimming.

CREDIT AFFAIRS BETTER, SAYS ROBERTSON

Pittsburgh, Aug. 29 (AP)—Financial and credit affairs "are clearly and positively better," said A. W. Robertson, chairman of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., speaking before a group of industrial and business leaders at the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce today.

Robertson outlined the purposes of the national committee on rehabilitation, of which he was made chairman at the economic conference in Washington last week. He explained the committee was formed to induce manufacturing and other industries to make capital expenditures now, for rehabilitation of plant and replacement of obsolete and worn out equipment.

IMPROVEMENT PLANS

"Improvement or alteration work done now," he continued, "would be helpful in many ways. It would help unemployment. It would cost less. It would interfere little with routine production."

Stressing conditions favorable to the work his committee is promoting, Robertson pointed out that excess reserve of member banks of the Federal Reserve System approximate $300,000,000, forming a base for expansion of bank credit, and in consequence, bank deposits, of a potential maximum of $3,000,000,000. Currency hoarding, he added, is clearly decreasing and gold is returning from abroad.

12 REGIONAL CHAIRMEN

While explaining the amount of credit expansion may be a matter of guesswork, he estimated it should amount to $5,000,000,000.

Robertson explained that chairmen of regional committees in each of the 12 federal reserve districts are being chosen to promote rehabilitation work and that they would automatically become members of the national committee.

Mother Drowns 2 Children, Self; Third Child Escapes

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Aug. 29 (AP)—Mrs. William A. Simmons, 25, led her three small daughters into a lake near here last night under pretense of showing them "how to baptize" and drowned two of them and herself but the other jerked loose and took refuge on an island.

The survivor, Louise Simmons, 10, was found an hour later by a motorist. The child directed searchers in recovering the body of her mother and two sisters.

She said her mother, a seller of religious literature, drove with them from their home 16 miles to the lake and waded out into the water with Dorothy, 8, and Marjorie 6, in her arms.

Louise said she was led along by her hand but succeeded in breaking loose just before Mrs. Simmons and the other girls sank, although her mother tried to drag her under.

Coroner S. T. Harding said he has not found a motive for the drownings but he is withholding a formal verdict pending a thorough investigation.

GARNER'S EPIGRAM IS THE BEST OF CAMPAIGN; GOOD ONES NEEDED

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

The epigram of the week is undoubtedly Speaker Garner's. He wrote, you will remember, in his acceptance letter

PROF. ROGERS

"Government is not a pedagogue, a parson, nor a pied piper. It is merely a convenience of civilization, by which a set of rules is enforced on a community in the interest of order and justice."

It is about time the campaign got epigrammatic. The ability to make phrases seems to be passing among the politicians of our day. Mr. Hoover's style might be called useful and durable but it does not coruscate. There is no sparkle of phrasing. Mr. Roosevelt has coined one term, "the forgotten man," but a term is not an epigram. There has been no phrase maker since Wilson.

Other Famous Phrasemakers

Coolidge's one phrase, "I do not choose to run," gained its currency through a certain Yankee homeliness of speech plus a real bewilderment as to what he meant. Harding's "return to normalcy" gained attention because it was a new word and because the purists at once began a row as to whether it was a plain barbarism or a possible usage.

Wilson struck out phrases on his little portable typewriter as naturally as he breathed. Long practice in making university commencements, where it is necessary to say the same old things in new words, must have been good practice for him. "Too proud to fight," "pitiless publicity," "force to the uttermost," peace without victory," "we must make the world safe for democracy," "a little group of willful men," and others, stuck in the public mind and are now embalmed in the phrase books.

Theodore Roosevelt, without Mr. Wilson's educational advantages, was quite as successful: "The strenuous life," "walk softly and carry a big stick," "malefactors of great wealth," "mollycoddle," "the man with the muck rake," all had a tang to them that lingered on the tongue

Grover Cleveland was an infrequent but successful phrasemaker: "A condition and not a theory" is a classic of his. But his great success, and one of the great successes of political epigram, was "innocuous desuetude," which caught the attention of a public perhaps more literate than ours of today. It was matched only by the Rev. Mr. Burchard's famous and unfortunate, "Rum, Romanism, and Rebellion," which lost Blaine his election.

Old Town Must Smile

I should like to see Mr. Garner's statement about "pedagogues, parsons and pied pipers" go down into history likewise. It has the artful aid of apt alliteration, which is a great help in an epigram It is unfortunate that the second sentence is pedestrian in comparison. But the first is as good as anything Senator Moses ever got off, even the "sons of the wild jackass," and quite as pungent.

Furthermore, it is good Jefferson doctrine. Old Tom, wher ever he sits in Valhalla, must smile and approve Jefferson believed in pedagogues He was one himself; at least he was proud enough of his interest in education to have the words "Founder of the University of Virginia" placed on his tombstone. To him education was the necessary corollary of democracy Only an educated democracy is fit to rule itself. But he did not believe in having it descend from above, like the gentle dew from heaven, from the federal government. He wanted it to gush forth from below, from the local public school system. He would not, I suspect, approve of a federal department of education. And he would have laughed angrily at the idea of the government spending hundreds of millions to issue educational pamphlets telling the democracy how to fashion romper suits, make pickles, and raise frogs for market.

I do not know whether Jefferson liked parsons. Parsons certainly did not like him. The Massachusetts clergy in a body combined to vilify him as an atheist and a rascal, because of his theological views. He was a Deist with a touch of what would be called today "philosophical anarchism." He was proud of destroying the political power of the Episcopal church in Virginia. He was absent from America when the constitution was drawn, but the absence of any reference in it to God or church reflects his wishes.

The idea of the government as the instrument of a powerful minority of sectarian Puritans, would have been repugnant to him. The idea of a government dictated to by bishops and church councils and the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals would have filled him with righteous anger. He wished government to be neither schoolmaster nor parson, but—shall we say?—moderator. The governor on the engine.

I doubt if Jefferson had ever heard of the Pied Piper, although the legend is very old. The 18th century had little to do with mediaeval legends. I wonder if the Speaker was thinking of that passage in Browning's poem on the subject.

At last the people in a body
To the Town Hall came flocking;
Alas, cried they, our mayor's a noddy,
And as for the Corporation, shocking!
To think we buy gowns lined with ermine
For dolts who can't or won't determine
What's to rid us of our vermin.

The rats, I suppose, are the bureaucracy, the civil service, and even our elected representatives, who are eating the country up. The mayor and corporation should be the Hoover administration, from Mr. Garner's point of view.

But how, then, can the Pied Piper be government? Perhaps he represents the promises of Messrs. Hoover and Mills, the lure of prosperity. At any rate, the Pied Piper got rid of the rats. Then the people refused to pay him. So he piped the children away and they never came back.

What Will Hoover Bring Out?

Sorry, but it doesn't work out. It sounds nice but that's all. Mr. Hoover must be the Pied Piper who lures his voters away into the mountain of fantasy and they never come back. But he did get rid of the rats! You can't deny that! Democratically speaking, the mayor ought to be Mr. Hoover (or even Mr. Walker), and the champion Piper, Mr. Roosevelt. In that case it is he who pipes the children away. No way out there!

I am afraid Mr. Garner was ill-advised to drag the Pied Piper into it. It's too complicated. But I suppose that hearing Mr. Roosevelt's elaborate figures of speech about "Alice in Wonderland," he thought it best to get a little imaginative himself.

What do you bet that Mr. Hoover's next speech mentions either "The Water Babies" or "Peter Pan?"

SECOND HOLDUP NETS PAIR $70

For the second time in five weeks Daniel Pitcher, manager of a chain store in Pearl st., Somerville, was held up by two bandits and robbed of $70 today

The holdup pair, one of them red-haired, were the same who got $100 in the store July 20, Pitcher told police

While today's holdup was in progress, Dennis Flor of Franklin st., Somerville, an order boy, entered the store and immediately thrust his hands up

The boy was ordered to put his hands down and join Pitcher in the back room

The thieves fled around a corner to Franklin st., where a faded green sedan had been left with motor running

The sedan was reported stolen from John Patterson of Bloomingdale st., Chelsea. It contained more than $300 worth of dresses and had been occupied a few minutes before it was stolen, by his sister, Patterson told police.

INJURY HALTS CALLAN FIGHT

The showdown battle between Rev. John J. Callan and his wife over the Callan estate in Wellesley, where Callan and his daughters have been withstanding a siege of process servers, was postponed for two weeks today

The cause of the delay is a sprained ankle suffered by Mrs. Callan's counsel, Edward F. McClennen

Callan's equity suit, in which he demands return of $150,000 put up as security for a loan with his father-in-law, was to have been heard by Frank Deland, as master.

Mrs. Callan did not appear, but Callan was on hand with his lawyers. The latter were led by John P. Feeney, who was revealed as again in personal command of Callan's legal warfare, after several months in which the work has been handled by associates

The temporary injunction, in which the wife is forbidden from ousting Callan from the Wellesley house, continues in force pending completion of hearings by Deland.

Dominic Russeau of Athens st., South Boston, who claims to be a minister on Sunday and a barber during the week, weighed several Biblical passaged against several from law books today in municipal court and found the former wanting.

And it cost him $10.

Dominic arrived on the Common yesterday in the role of an evangelist. Right in the center of the Common, police say, he started a revival meeting. Before long he was surrounded by a crowd.

Patrolman James E. Cusick of Lagrange st. station asked Dominic for his speaking permit. He paid no attention, the policeman said, and continued speaking. Cusick warned him to stop if he had no permit, but the barber-minister is alleged to have ignored the warning. A short time later he was arrested.

In court today he faced a charge of speaking without a permit. Pleading not guilty, he started to conduct his own defense. Biblical passages flowed as he pleaded innocence, but the legal statutes prevailed and Dominic was ordered by Judge Duff to pay a fine of $10.

MEDFORD WOMEN PUSH TAX ACTION

THREATEN TO BOLT SPECIAL MEETING

Leader Assails Official Passing of Buck, Says Time Has Come for Action

Unless Medford aldermen vote to hold an executive session at tonight's special meeting, the women of the taxpayers' committee, under the leadership of Mrs. Evelyn M. Bracy, will promptly leave the hall.

"There is too much passing the buck in our city government," Mrs. Bracy declared today. "The mayor blames the aldermen for the high tax rate and the aldermen blame the mayor. There is no co-operation. How can we get anywhere unless we have co-operation."

MEANS AVAILABLE

"There are plenty of ways to cut down our city expenses and the mayor knows it, or he ought to know it after spending six years as an alderman, and the aldermen know it. What we want to do is to meet the mayor and the aldermen; bring them face to face, and then hear what they have to say."

Upon written request of the taxpayers' committee Mayor Burke called tonight's meeting. Mayor Burke says that he informed the women of the difference between a special meeting of the board which is almost always an open meeting and a committee of the whole meeting which need not necessarily be an open meeting and that he asked the women to write in and tell him which they desired. He says that the letter asked for a special board meeting.

Members of the board of aldermen who have been asked whether tonight's meeting would be public or private have all replied that it would be an open meeting.

MASS MEETINGS PUBLIC

They declare that both mass meetings were public and that they saw no reason for not holding tonight's meeting in the open.

Several thousand names have already been signed to the petitions being circulated by volunteer workers of the women's committee. The petition will go to Governor Ely.

"If there is no other way, let Governor Ely clean out the rats at City Hall," Mrs. Bracy said. "And when I say rats, I am using the term which our mayor used when he shook his finger, pointing across the corridor from his office in the direction of the aldermanic chamber."

"Just how do the women propose to lower the tax rate this year?" Mrs. Bracy was asked.

"If every woman who owns property in Medford—and a majority of the homes are in the names of the women—refuses to pay that $8.40 increase on this year's taxes and only pays the $30.80 rate of last year, do you think for a minute that the city will take all of that property for non-payment of taxes? And if the city did take that property, what would the city do for revenue the next year?"

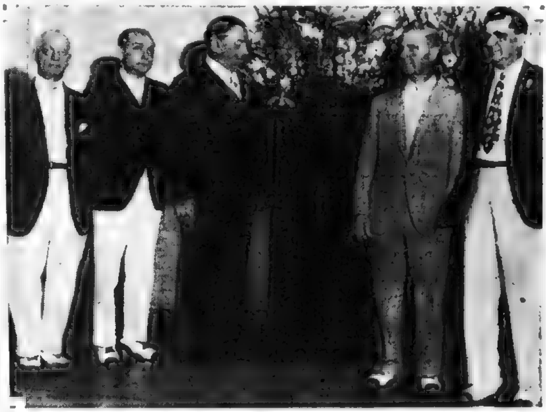
SUMMERFIELD'S DOUBLED IN SIZE

Addition of the Store at the Corner of Stuart St. Gives 125,000 Square Feet of Floor Space—Grand Opening Sale Today



I. H. STERN EMIL SINGER MAYOR CURLEY JULIUS STERN BENJAMIN STERN

Mayor Curley officiated today at opening of addition to Summerfield's at Washington and Stuart sts. This picture of Mayor and store executives was taken at opening ceremony.

The 22 years' growth and success of Summerfield's complete home furnishings store is reflected in an outstanding fashion in the new and greater Summerfield's which opened to the buying public of New England today at Washington and Stuart Streets in the heart of the retail furniture district of Boston.

The extensive expansion program [illegible] Summerfield's which started in a small way in the same general location [illegible] and has been expanding steadily ever since. The opening of the new five-story and basement furniture house today is more than a business expansion even though it does occupy an entire city block. It is an expansion which demonstrates in no uncertain manner the faith of the officers of Summerfield's in the future of Boston and New England. Benjamin Stern, the president of Summerfield's, aptly commented the other day that the new Summerfield's typifies in even a more striking way the faith that the buying public of Boston and New England have in Summerfield's.

Staff Enthusiastic

Mr. Ben. Stern and the entire Summerfield organization, for that matter, are enthusiastic over the greater Summerfield's. While an army of skilled building mechanics, designers and decorators have been creating a finer Summerfield's with [illegible] Washington and [illegible] the Prime Furniture [illegible] of Summerfield's. They assert [illegible] that they frankly say are the greatest furniture values in the 22 years' history of Summerfield's to greet the public who came from far and wide corners of the six New England States and beyond to join with Summerfield's in celebrating the first day of the big opening sale.

Mayor Curley and other officials of both city and the State attended the opening this morning to congratulate the officers of the company on their aggressiveness, and expressed admiration for their courage and business leadership when few [illegible] such a big way.

Planned Long Ago

Summerfield's planned the expansion just completed a long time ago, in fact in the days when pessimism was more prevalent than during recent weeks, but President Stern had the faith that the future would see the return of better times. Then again, an ever increasing business was demanding enlarged store area, so Mr. Stern many months ago thought the time was perfect in many respects to begin his contemplated expansion program. He directed that the work be spread out so as to keep the largest number of mechanics employed the greatest number of hours. In other times the work of remodelling could have been accomplished in a much shorter period of time, but President Stern wanted to assist in the unemployment situation. It was a tremendous undertaking in the face of the business outlook at that time, but nevertheless he gave orders that no expense be spared in achieving a greater Summerfield's worthy of the progressive organization that had the courage and foresight to take such a forward step.

So this morning Summerfield's opened with a bang one of the largest and most complete furniture stores in New England selling quality merchandise. Furniture values of unlimited variety, seemingly at the attractive lower prices of other days have been assembled on every one of the five spacious floors given over entirely to retail display and selling, and in the big basement, too, which participates also in the great and grand opening sale with more than its share of furniture values and bargains.

Doubled Floor Area

Summerfield's have practically doubled the floor area of their main store and the acquisition of the premises formerly occupied by the Prime Furniture Company [illegible] corner location at Washington and Stuart sts. [illegible] of the most attractive in the [illegible] furniture district.

Mr. Benj. Stern is most enthusiastic over the wonderful accomplishment of his store, and yesterday he recounted interestingly the details of the various steps in the business career of Summerfield's since it began 22 years ago, and more particularly those since the company took over the holdings of the Prime Company last December. President Stern in his interview indicated that if other business leaders in the various lines took the forward step that Summerfield's did back in the gloom of the early part of the year, such leadership would have speeded the return of business normalcy. Mr. Stern was reticent of the part he had in spreading out the work of rebuilding so that it would be of the greatest possible assistance to those seeking employment. It was a big job and an expensive one, he admitted but he said he felt free to attempt it even in the slump because "Summerfield's is the house of a million friends," he added, his face wreathed in smiles of pride and pleasure.

The entire front of the Summerfield buildings along Washington at Stuart st. and Dore st., have been remodeled and painted brightly and artistically so that the facade is in bronzed beauty. The exterior framework of the street floor display windows has been skilfully treated so as to produce a delightfully realistic green marble effect, and above the first floor the entire frontage is attractively done in a deep cream color.

Large Warehouse

Summerfield's lays claim to 125,000 square feet of floor space in the new and larger store, but in addition to this the company has an even larger warehouse at the Army Base in South Boston, and a retail store in Somerville. President Stern is rightfully proud of the enviable reputation of the concern he heads, and likewise of the fact that Summerfield's has outfitted 250,000 homes in every nook and corner of New England and other parts of the country.

And now President Stern says he opens a finer store, more spacious and more completely equipped, to give greater service to the people of New England who have made possible the bigger Summerfield's. In the remodelling and acquisition of additional space some departments have been enlarged and in many cases new departments have been added so that Summerfield's, says President Stern, is in an even better position than ever to supply the demands of customers both old and new. Wandering through the great furniture house from fifth floor to basement, one is impressed by the tremendous and varied collection of furniture, rugs, stoves, radios, Frigidaire electric refrigerators, oil burners for the kitchen, oil heaters for the home, luggage, jewelry, golf equipment, etc., on hand to completely equip a new home or replenish the existing home.

President Stern says to the people of New England: "This is your store. It is your great opening sale, and we welcome you to be our guest, feeling sure we have assembled a collection of furniture values on the six great floors that will long live in the memory of those who come to Summerfield's this week to join with us in celebrating an event made possible by 22 years of square dealing and service to the buying public of New England."

A [illegible] with [illegible] when [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Mrs. George Mather [illegible] Mrs. Benjamin Hatch were in charge.

The Antiquarian House was built in 1809 by Maj. William Hammett of Plymouth and with its carefully carried out appointments is typical of prosperous New England home of the early 19th century. Its architecture has the grace and delicacy of the second classic revival. Inside the house the furniture, the books, papers and ornaments, the glass, china and clothes are those of a family of that era.

Mr. Thomas Hedge, a Plymouth merchant, established himself in the house in 1830 and his descendants dined there last Sunday evening.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. William Hedge of Brookline and Plymouth, Mr. and Mrs. William Townsend and their daughter, Miss Rose Townsend, Mr. Frank Holmes, Dr. and Mrs. Halsey Loder, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hedge, Dr. and Mrs. William Hitchcock. Mr. Joseph Holmes and his mother, Mrs. Arthur Holmes, of Kingston, were also among the guests.

Slump Misses Monte Carlo

By MAURICE BURKE

Monte Carlo, Aug. 29 (US)—Here where the Graustark stories were born and the roulette wheel has solved the problem of perpetual motion no one appears to recognize the depression.

Here everyone dresses for dinner, the prettiest gowns are worn, and the loveliest ladies are in evidence.

Friday evening is always the gala evening. A floating island is moored below the overhanging porch of a celebrated restaurant and waiters hurry over improvised bridges while fireworks sparkle and music plays.

Dining there I saw the American born Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, who is rapidly acquiring the reputation of being one of the best dressed women in Europe. She wore a dark plum colored crepe georgette swathed close to her figure, a dress without any fullness whatsoever, serpentine in effect.

Grand Duke Dmitri's wife, the former Audrey Emery, was nearby, wearing white muslin with narrow broken stripes of gray blue. The skirt, cut in straight lines, flared from the bodice, which was low in back but moderately high in front.

Rosie Dolly's party was Mrs. Cunningham Reid, sister of Lady Louis Mountbatten. She wore pale yellow lace with necklace and bracelets of topaze.

Also there were Elsa Maxwell and Mrs. Ritchie Harrison McCormack, of Baltimore. Mrs. McCormack wore black and white chiffon; Mrs. George Blabon, of New York, chartreuse green crepe,

UP FRONT IN YOUNG SOCIETY RANKS

NANCY WHITMAN EMILY KIDDER

These two young ladies are doing their bit to make this summer's social program along the North Shore an outstanding success. They are Nancy Whitman and Emily Kidder, who have been very much in evidence at the numerous society activities.

Pilgrim Rites Re-Enacted

Miss Rose Briggs, daughter of Mrs. George R. Briggs and niece of Dean LeBaron Briggs of Harvard, has established a very interesting custom in Plymouth. On alternate Fridays, starting at the old town church in Leyden st., a group of people dressed in the costumes of the Mayflower characters march slowly and with great solemnity up the street to Burial Hill just as they did in the early days of the Plymouth settlement.

It is a most impressive sight to watch this "Progress" and see in the group Elizabeth Tilly, Humility Cooper, Priscilla and John Allen, the Hopkins family, Elder Brewster and many other of the famous pioneer characters whose intrepid spirit brought them to the shores of Plymouth in 1620. This custom, established by Miss Briggs, has persisted since the Tercentenary celebration which took place in 1920.

The Progress moves to the top of Burial Hill and the old hymns are sung and old sermons read. Many socially prominent people of the South Shore don the coarse and simple garb and follow the custom of their forefathers.

On Friday the cast of the Progress consisted of some of the social lights of the South Shore: Elder Brewster, Mr. Knudsen; Governor Bradford, Clarence Bradford, a direct descendant, Capt. Myles Standish, Mr. Adrian Whiting; Mrs. Carver, Mrs. William Hedge, Dr. Samuel Fuller, Mr. Jacob Paten, Mrs. Brewster, Miss Sherman Whipple; Wrestling Brewster, Sylvia Fry; Love Brewster, Margaret Louise Whipple; Priscilla Mullen, Marjorie Belcher; Priscilla Alden, Alden Sherman, Francis Eaton and child, Mr. Asa Burgess and Hilda Belcher.

Mrs. Philip Barnes was in charge of the "Progress."

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

In her new novel, "The Sheltered Life" (Doubleday-Doran), Ellen Glasgow, with consummate art, leads gradually and legitimately to as dramatic a climax as could be imagined.

The central figure around whom the story revolves is Eva Birdsong, a woman who has been a Southern belle and who is still a local beauty, known in her day as the Virginia Lily, because of her resemblance to Langtry. But in reality there are two heroines, for the girl, Jenny Blair Archbald, is the cause of the final tragic scene, the little, neurotic creature consumed by a vast passion for a man old enough to be her father.

* * *

We first see her in the Southern town, at the age of nine and a half living in the old-established home, with its ruby-red drawing room, with her mother, her Aunt Etta, a professional invalid, and her old grandfather, General Archbald. No wonder the child grew up "queer," out of key with life. Afar, she worshipped the beauty of Mrs. Birdsong, and afar, for a long time, she gazed on George Birdsong, the exotic woman's husband.

If Eva Birdsong, who might have been a great singer and taken the drawing rooms of London by storm, so much as stepped into her garden or walked down the street in those days of 1906 the whole neighborhood peeped from its windows to catch a glimpse of her loveliness. She was still in her early thirties, yet here she was, almost a flower born to blush unseen, or a Lucy Gray, who dwelt among the untrodden ways; a hidden glory that the world outside might have idolized.

* * *

But Eva loved her none-too-faithful and almost ne'er-do-well husband with a fiery passion. Though tongues wagged at his peccadillos, she seemed to suspect nothing of his infidelities. Sheltered, but not rich, she lived out her cloistered days. Yet once, at a dance, she had become furiously jealous when he left the floor with a girl on his arm and stepped into the moonlight. She made a scene; she left the ball. Only in the security of her home would she find that she could rule him, hold him.

What she never learned was the secret between him and Jenny Blair. No one ever found it out. For the child had given a promise never to betray him when, through a curious chance, she had come upon him in the mulatto woman's house on the edge of town, just over the spot where the evil odors rose to confound the last remnants of Southern aristocracy—a little band who clung closely together, decaying, dying, passing slowly but surely on.

* * *

It is in her revelation of the town and its drab existence, in the types so magnificently drawn, that Miss Glasgow shines. She knows these tragic—should one say "forlorn"?—people. Their shoddiness, their august poverty, their piteous clinging to tradition, their false pride, their virtues and their despairs. We see the hushed paneled rooms, the stiff brocades, the men who have desperately settled down and lost themselves in a world of fading women who live only to be pampered, and who indulge themselves in imaginary illnesses and gloom. There is something bleak, and at the same time glorious, in their tragic destinies. Old General Archbald, striving to keep step with the onward march, but failing utterly.

Never, I think, has Miss Glasgow written better than in the interlude, called "The Deep Past," when she analyses the the mood of the gallant gentleman, the man who has traveled, seen the world and come home, beaten, crushed to live out his drowsy days in benighted Queensborough. There is irony in her writing, but likewise there are pity and tenderness and kindness.

* * *

Aunt Etta, who languishes on sofas reading French novels; the lad John, who is taken into the Birdsong household and studies medicine, becomes fairly successful and then longs for larger horizons; Mrs. Archibald, patient and old fashioned, unable to see beyond her own four walls, the negroes who form a dim background—all these Miss Glasgow paints with her usual skill. There is no mere skimming over the surface. Though the story itself is slight, it is full of pathos and beauty. In less sure hands it would totter and break; but Miss Glasgow's velvet style, flawless and energetic, keeps the tale moving to its Greek conclusion.

Some one should make a collection of Ellen Glasgow's epigrams, from this and all her previous books. "They Stooped to Folly" was studded with them. This book, too, is alive with astute observations. Let me give a few, at random, and then beg of you to read this gorgeous novel. It is head and shoulders above anything I have read this year.

* * *

"As late as the Spring of 1906 she was still regarded less as a woman than as a memorable occasion."

"The Crockers were good people, plain but respectable, the kind of plain people who could be trusted in revolutions."

"Men aren't logical creatures, my dear. Nor, for that matter, is life logical."

"The only way to be rid of a skeleton is to drag it into the light and clothe it in flesh and blood."

"No man needed protection less, but because he had lived a solitary male among women, he could never escape it."

"One woman after another had enslaved his sympathy more than his passion, and never had she seemed to be the woman his passion demanded."

"Even a man in love does not necessarily wish to love all the time."

"So much virtue passed into a poet when he was dead; when his immortal part was bound in English calf and put into a library."

"Spring was as fair as it looks to a man about to be hanged."

"That air of secret wisdom with which inexperience surveys the mistakes of experience."

"When a man is young, every woman seems to be moving in his direction. When he is old, he realizes that they are all moving away."

Summer Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

Many women subconsciously depend upon their wardrobe to lift them from the dumps. Clothes act as a stimulant upon most women, almost as great as a cocktail. One finds the intelligent lady of the social world dressing with the cocktail psychology in mind. There is the Martini costume "par example," particularly recommended in the case of "Miladie" feeling a little low; perhaps her best beau may have announced his engagement to another girl!

Instead of walking on the "shady side of the street" with an old hat and tacky clothes, with wrinkles in her stockings and an unpowdered nose, the wise young lady immediately goes to a modish establishment and finds for herself the most delightful little hat she can find, fluffs her hair in a becoming manner, dons the "Martini Special" and steps out in a costume twice as unusual, four times as subtle and six times as chic as anything she has ever had before so that when she turns to her mirror she faces a new and scintillating personality ready to cope with any situation that may arise.

The snappy little "pick-me-up" hats, these new models of velvet that are jauntily placed over one ear, showing the modish coiffeur, are warranted to snap anyone out of the doldrums and make them see that "Life can be so sweet on the sunny side of the street"!!

One young lady who looks as though she finds life exceedingly sweet on the sunny side of the street is Miss Anna DeCormis, of Brookline. She is a most attractive young lady and has a priceless way of getting the best out of life. She is very popular with the younger set and, incidentally, she does know how to dress. She really looks "pretty special" in her black velvet gown with the stylish little puffy sleeves and wee black velvet bows. The neck of the dress is becoming in its round line and the skirt follows the dictates of Dame Fashion in touching the floor. Miss DeCormis is tall and slender and has light golden brown hair that she brushes back from her face and does low over her ears. She has that fascinating little heart-shaped forehead line better known as the "Widow's Peak," which is just one more of her charms.

Miss DeCormis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Redington DeCormis, of Beacon st. She is a graduate of The May School on Beacon st., Boston, and is to make her debut this season.

Then there is Mrs. George Sturgis (Rosamond Bennett) of Weston, who, with her family, is spending the summer at Wings Neck. Mrs. Sturgis is a great addition to the South Shore colony. She looks very attractive in her canary yellow sport dress, with ankle sox and brown and white sport shoes. Mrs. Sturgis is of a slender athletic build. She is an accomplished horsewoman.

"No one need fear Birthdays" says Betty Compson

"I'M OVER 30," says Betty Compson, popular screen star, "and I don't mind admitting it in the least. No woman need fear added years—if she knows how to take care of her appearance!

"Actresses of the stage and screen know a young-looking skin is absolutely necessary. For years I have used Lux Toilet Soap, and find it certainly does wonders for the complexion."

The secret Betty Compson tells is shared by countless other lovely actresses.

Of the 694 important Hollywood actresses, including all stars, 686 use fragrant Lux Toilet Soap regularly. It is so utterly white!

Surely you will want to try it!

CAPITAL RIDES SECOND TIME ON CARROUSEL

By GILBERT SELDES

THE IMPORTANCE of the first Washington Merry-Go-Round was as much due to the way the public received it as to the book itself. Brilliantly written, full of entertainment, the book dived under the surface of our political life and showed us what kind of men were making our laws, fiddling about the depression and preparing to run again for office. It did not unearth graft or scandal; its most serious revelations were about character and temperament. We learned that a President could be short-tempered, a Vice-President silly, a Justice pompous, a Senator a fool, a cabinet man a snob. And, prepared by three years of impatience with our leaders we accepted the book with infinite pleasure. No one, in my hearing, said that the dignity of the government of the United States was being undermined; no one said that such things ought not to be printed about the men who were sacrificing great fortunes in order to save their country. We relished the bits of social scandal; but more than that, we were glad to know something about the inner quality of the men in whose hands our fate lay.

GILBERT SELDES

Funnier—Not Merrier

Flushed with success, the authors might have written a second book with more trivial scandal, more amusing anecdotes and a greater contempt for their subjects. Actually More Merry-Go-Round (which Liveright has just issued) is like the earlier book in its qualities of entertainment, but it is more serious. The authors have had another year in which to observe Washington dancing on the edge of the depression, and they are no more pleased than the farmers in Iowa are pleased. They begin their first chapter with the hunger march of a year ago and end it with the expulsion of the bonus army this summer—and between the beginning and the end they pack all the social and official triviality of the capital, with an overtone of the hysteria which ended in the riot at Anacostia.

The Public Mood

I do not know whom Mr. Hoover has appointed to be official pulse-feeler of the American people. I do not know whether he reads newspapers and magazines hostile to his administration or is, as has been suggested, so surrounded by yes-men that he could make better movies than Hollywood at the Rapidan. In his place I should watch the reviews of More Merry-Go-Round and its sales chart to discover whether the country, also, is in a less amiable mood, in a frankly ugly mood, as compared with last year. For the tone of the second book is, in spite of the amusing stories, serious. If Chief Justice McReynolds refused to let golfers play through him while he searched for a ball, that may be funny; but if he has a passion against longshoremen, and uses his position to defeat every measure in their favor, the joke turns sour, especially when a goodly number of longshoremen are out of work. If the President does not see that the hunger marchers of winter will turn into the bonus marchers of summer, the joke is too fine for us to laugh at, at all. Behind this book, in short, are ten million men out of work—and the incompetence of ninety-nine out of a hundred men whom we have given the job of protecting us.

Invent Something

The jacket of "Beware of Imitations" (published by the Viking Press) asks "Are you bothered by tapeworms . . . colliding trains . . . airless rocking chairs . . . exhaustion from hat-tipping . . . recalcitrant fish . . . anonymous eggs . . . uncomfortable bicycle seats . . lack of dimples . . ." and assures you that if you read the book you can be cured. After a foreword and index the book contains not one word of original matter; the pictures and descriptions are taken from the records of the United States Patent Office, and they range from suspenders which can be transformed into fire-escapes to hammocks to sling across seats in a railway carriage. A perfumed and illuminated cardboard figure of a cat is offered to scare mice away, and a bell collar for the same purpose is called "humane" because a belled rat runs to its fellows and persuades them that it is not worth staying in a house where rodents are so badly handled. Ed Wynn had a similar idea—and Ed Wynn is the only man who has made money out of such inventions. "Beware of Imitations" is sold at one dollar and is one of the very few funny books at that price, or near it, which are worth the money.

VALENTINE

An Exciting Story of Modern Love

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Val Unable to Answer Joe's Mother

The Story So Far

Valentine Macfarlane is the shy, dreamy daughter of Millie Macfarlane, a widow, whose gay, romantic nature is not spoiled by poverty. Millie goes to the Orient, and Val is taken to her Aunt Julia's. The years pass and Val finds herself falling in love with Joe Carey, her girlhood chum. She goes to see him. Joe's mother finds him kissing Val and makes a scene.

Now Go On With the Story

ANGER AND DISGUST rose in the torrent of tears that sprang to her eyes, overflowed them, ran streaming down her cheeks. She didn't want to cry! Why should she give that horrible, fat Mrs. Carey the satisfaction of seeing her cry? Oh, why did she come? Why didn't she go? Why did she just STAND there, taking it—

"And don't you think you can get my boy! Because he's a good boy. He's been a good son to me, and he wouldn't leave me for any girl. He knows what I've sacrificed for him. I've worked my fingers to the bone, and pinched and saved, and saved and done without, and worked my fingers—"

"Mama! Mama!"

[illegible] her [illegible] nightgown [illegible] her mother's heaving body.

"All my children love me. A mother's love—" the thick, impassioned words were almost lost in sobs—"the only true thing in the world, and if you, or any other girl dare—dare—to think—"

EXCUSES MOTHER

"Now, Ma, that's enough. Go to bed, there's a good girl, Vivian. Don't hang on to me! Ma, you'll wake up the whole house, and you know you'll be sorry for what you're saying to Val. Val: Ma's all tired out, she's had a hard day, so you must excuse her."

[illegible]

Go to bed, Ma. Please!" Joe repeated in the same unruffled, matter of fact voice.

[illegible]

"And all the good it will do you! My Joe's leaving town. He's going where YOU'LL never see him again! I felt terrible, but now I'm glad—GLAD! Do you hear me, Miss Valentine Butter-mouth Macfarlane?"

Joe caught up with her as she gained the gravel walk. She was walking stiffly, holding her head very high. She had the feeling that if she ran, if she did anything fast she'd cry again.

Dimly she remembered Betty and [illegible] boy friend [illegible] didn't know whether [illegible]

[illegible]

"Val!" [illegible] on the gravel. "Val, wait."

[illegible]

"Don't be so touchy, Val. Ma didn't mean it."

"Touchy! Oh! And you know she did mean every word. She's always hated me. But she doesn't hate me any more than I despise—"

"Now, Val, pull up. What if she did mean it? Anybody's worked as hard as ma, and raised seven kids like she has, on nothing, has a right to be nasty now and then. Oh, forget it, will you, Val?"

He was so worried, so divided between his desire to excuse his mother and placate her that Val [illegible]

[illegible]

"Oh, all right," she said grudgingly. "But I won't ever come to your place again. That's settled."

"Well, I'd better go home."

"I'll walk across the street with you."

"Such a long trip," she [illegible]

"A tuxedo! You said you did—"

TUXEDO EXPLAINED

"Oh! I got off the track. Yes I have. I got it two weeks ago for a kind of dinner I went to over in San Francisco."

"You didn't tell me!"

"It happened sort of quick. Through one of the fellows at the oil station. A model I made for Hexter's garage he's going to build in Vallejo. I got the notion to send it to ma's brother Joel—the one ma named me for—he has a lot of dough—lives out in Minnesota.

"He came out here after pa died and wanted to take me back with him then, but naturally ma wouldn't stand for that. So we didn't hear from him for year, but he wrote to me a while ago, quite a nice letter, and sent me quite a check. So we've buried the hatchet, though he and ma still don't correspond—"

"You sent him the model, and he liked it?"

"Yes—that's the idea. He showed it to some architects back there and through them this San Francisco outfit got interested and invited me to come to this dinner. In fact, I'm going back to Minnesota—he's got me into a big firm there. It's what I've always wanted—my big chance, so I've got to take it. Ma's heartbroken, but I can do more for her and the kids there than I can on the layout I've got now—"

"Why don't you think about yourself for a change?" she said a little bitterly, but it wasn't just for that that she felt bitter. Here he was, her best friend really, the oldest friend she had, going off half way across the continent, and not even being sorry to leave her.

"I'll miss you," she added a little stiffly, when he did not answer.

"I'll miss you, too, Val. Gosh, it's funny to think of going so far away. Poor ma is going to miss me. She was pretty cut up at first—"

"Yes?" Ma again! Ma, ma, ma! If he said it again she'd scream!

"You won't hold it against her?"

"What?"

VAL IRRITATED

"Tonight. You see, I'd just told her. Just decided myself, so she was in an upset state to start with."

"It doesn't matter. I won't be seeing much of your family after you're gone and Betty and I are through school."

He walked around to the back door with her.

It was dark and the scent of the heliotrope was still heavy and sweet in the air.

She took his hand. "Good night, Joe. Thanks for saying you'd go to the dance."

"Oh, that's all right, Val. About the last chance we'll have to go anywhere, I guess. I'm only staying until after the kid's graduation to please ma."

Until after the kid's graduation. Betty's. Not hers. Betty's.

"Good night, Joe."

She watched his long, dark shadow tilt along the side of the house. Then she turned and let herself into the dark kitchen.

CHOICE BITS OF NEW FALL MILLINERY

NEW TURBAN ROLL BRIM

Perched so precariously atop milady's head that they are almost off altogether, these millinery creations, worn by Miss Myrna Loy, film notable, sound the keynote of the new autumn season. The bright colored model at the left features the new turban roll brim and is topped off with a jaunty bow in the back.

SOFT GREY MOTIF

The "roll" motif is also carried out in the neckline of the chartreuse frock which is of the same material as the hat. The hat which Miss Loy is wearing at the right is of a soft grey woolen material and is surmounted with an unusual pompon. A frock of the same material and gloves complete the ensemble.

Lady Ought to Carry Her Own Coat

What is the proper etiquette in regard to a young man carrying a young lady's coat and also her umbrella?

I have a friend who does not object to carrying a lady's umbrella, but objects strenuously to carrying her coat. I maintain that he should carry her coat, while he says he feels ridiculous doing so. W.

I agree with your friend about this. Of course, if a man wishes to carry a woman's coat, he may with gallantry and propriety do this. But I see no special reason why he should do this. If I were a man I am sure that I'd admire a woman who carries her own coat and her umbrella and who would insist on carrying these even if I suggested that I'd carry them!

Inappropriate Gift

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A gentleman has been invited to the wedding of a business acquaintance. He does not know the bride-to-be. Would it be proper to offer him their wedding invitations (he is in this type of business) for the gift? READER.

I realize that this suggestion of a gift would be offered by this man with the best and kindest of spirit, but under these circumstances it would not be well-advised or appropriate. If the situation were reversed . . . that is, if he were a special friend of the bride's family . . . it would be more appropriate, for it is the bride's family who provide the invitations and announcements. The bride's family would have their own plans for their invitations, and such a suggestion might lead to distinct embarrassment.

Color to Match Your Tan

WHEN the complexion has taken on a deep tan, the happiest selection of lipstick coloring is cherry or raspberry; orange shades are likely to do a sickly fade-away when the skin is bronzed. Cream rouge holds on longer than the kind one digs from the compact, and so has gained a greater popularity than is has had in the past. And now the dearhearts select rouge and lipstick of precisely the same shades. Make-up is one of the fine arts.

Choose Your Color

THE GIRL with olive skin, dark hair and dark eyes looks well gowned in black combined with a bit of vivid coloring, like jade green or Chinese red. White suits her better than delicate pastel tones, of which her best choice is apple green or mauve. Browns are not for her; they make her skin look sallow, and grey simply won't do at all.

Cottons to Be Popular for Fall Wear

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, Aug. 29. Cottons, especially those of a heavy, crepey texture, are slated among autumn successes in Paris fashion prophecies. In the new spongy weaves, they are scheduled to be worn not only for country dresses, suits and jackets but for a certain type of informal town costume as well.

Many of these new cotton weaves give every appearance of wool fibres. They are woven in loose, thick textures and may be crushed and sat upon without showing much evidence of wrinkling. Some have threads of wool or silk in their weaves, and though listed as washable fabrics, they keep their sturdy appearances much better if dry cleaned.

So cleverly have the materials been designed that they may be used for town clothes without any accusation of lack of dignity. Many of the best Paris dressmakers use these cotton materials with silks and woolens to make town clothes for early autumn wear.

The Maggy-Rouff costume shown today has many of the marks of a more expensive outfit. The crepey cotton fabric is sufficiently heavy to serve in a coat for country wear or for mornings in town. Sober in color—navy blue—it is brightened by a sleeveless blouse of brightly striped crepe de chine in blue and white. A scarf of the blouse fabric winds in and out of the coat collar; it begins by tying at one end at the center-front, just above the waist, then lies under the lapel until it emerges just below the shoulders. From then on, it wraps around the throat, outside the coat, and loops back upon itself at the other loose end.

The blouse uses its own fabric to bind the high neck-line, the front fastening arm-eyes and two little pockets just below the left shoulder.

Body Germs May Cause Cystitis

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

CYSTITIS, as the name implies, is an inflammation of the bladder. This inflammation may result from an infection elsewhere in the body. The germs may be located in the intestines. They may come from an infection of the kidney, carried to the bladder by the urine, or may be traced to the teeth, tonsils, gall bladder or appendix.

Dr. Copeland

The signs of this disturbance vary, depending upon the type of germs causing the inflammation. As a rule there is a demand for frequent emptying of the bladder, both day and night, and this may cause pain and burning. In severe cases the urine may be tinted with blood, and this is a danger signal that should not be overlooked.

Frequently symptoms of cystitis appear as a result of extreme nervousness, fatigue, exposure to cold, or drinking large quantities of irritating fluids such as strong tea, coffee or alcoholic beverages. In these cases their restriction leads to a quick and complete recovery.

Again cystitis may be a symptom of a serious constitutional disorder. In fact, it is commonly seen in advanced cases of diabetes, diseases of the nervous system or glandular disturbances. It may be one of the complications after childbirth. It may come from pressure of tumors or swellings of neighboring organs.

Cystitis should never be neglected. It warrants the attention of a physician. When signs of cystitis appear do not disregard them, but consider them as warnings. It is imperative that the underlying cause be discovered.

The Rhyming Optimist

Mona Lisa

She was inscrutable, and set apart
From other women that the world had known
By something enigmatic in her heart
Which gave no hint if it were flesh or stone.
Da Vinci, painting, saw her on a day
When sudden gladness flowered in her breast;
And yet she kept her rapture locked away
And sought to hide the treasure she possessed.
There have been many fairer, few so wise
Because she feared to flaunt her happiness.
The smile upon her lips, within her eyes,
Still leaves a curious world to dream, to guess
Was it a jewel or a suitor gained
The day she smiled that smile time leaves.

Daily True Story

Playing With Fire

FRIENDS OF THE Van Lear Hudsons shook their heads when they saw how indifferent the husband was with Charlotte. It was all well enough for a young wife to have men friends but it was another thing to go about so freely with a cavalier like Harley Lefcort.

Perhaps some of her women intimates were jealous, but Charlotte was evidently having her little flirtation and although Hudson must have been aware of it he never said a word in protest.

Charlotte [illegible] business [illegible] her husband had to work evenings [illegible] she [illegible] As for Lefcort he was a [illegible] Charlotte began by asking him to fill in at bridge parties, and after that began to go driving with him.

To tell the truth she felt a little miffed that Van Lear didn't make more objections. He seemed to take her for granted, but one evening when she was later than usual in reaching home she found him sitting with a book and she noticed it was upside down.

"Hello," said he, "how are you?"

"Oh, I'm all right," she responded. "I've been out riding with Harley; we had a puncture in the country and it certainly did use up a lot of time."

A SUGGESTION

"I see," said Van Lear, "do you mind if I make a suggestion?"

Charlotte nodded, "All you like," she smiled.

"Well, it's this—how much do you know about this chap? Are you sure you're wise in being seen with him so much?"

"Oh, now you're getting personal," said Charlotte crisply.

Van Lear looked up at her. "No, I don't mean it that way—I'm just trying to save you from being sorry afterwards—you know, my dear, I'm more in love with you than ever."

"Thanks," replied Charlotte, "but I don't like the way you show it."

And she resolved that she would be seen with Harley all the more. She called him the next afternoon and it was past midnight when she returned. Her husband said nothing but Nadine Cross, her best friend, did.

"You're a fool," she said, "the first thing you know you'll be weeping your eyes out—take it from me when a girl's got a husband like yours she'd better play the game—I'm a little ashamed of you, Charlotte."

"Do you know one of the most difficult things in this world?" asked Charlotte sweetly.

"O. K.," said Nadine, "I get you and I'll mind my own business, but listen to this—when you're running for sympathy don't come to me," and with that she turned and left her.

The more Charlotte saw of Harley the more he fascinated her. He made love so delightfully it never occurred to her that she was married—he made her feel as though she were in the days of her courting again, only he was a far more ardent suitor than Van Lear had ever been. She closed her eyes to the vague insinuations that crept into his lovemaking and flattered herself it must be her charm and beauty that attracted him since she had too little money to count.

What the ultimate end of her flirtation would be she had no idea nor did she allow herself to think of it.

HER OWN BLIND WAY

Meanwhile she took a perverse delight in causing gossip, wondering all the time just how far Van Lear would put up with the situation. However, he made no further reference to it.

And then one afternoon when she was preparing to go to meet Harley, a man she had never seen before appeared at her door.

"I hope you'll excuse me," he said blandly, "but you're Mrs. Hudson, aren't you—Mrs. Van Lear Hudson?"

"Yes, I am," said Charlotte. "What is it?"

"A little personal matter, Madame," he replied. "Might I come in?"

"If you won't be long," said Charlotte. "I have an appointment and I can't give you much time."

"My name is Marshall," announced the visitor. "If I said I came from Mrs. Harley Lefcort would it surprise you?"

"Mrs. Harley Lefcort," echoed Charlotte, blanching, "why you must be mistaken."

"It seems Mr. Lefcort has been seen a good deal in your company lately—and if I were Mrs. Lefcort I would certainly name you in a suit for damages."

"This is outrageous," said Charlotte, but her voice was shaking.

"Excuse me, Madame," her visitor went on. "You are a married woman and it can be proved you have deliberately led him on—a clear case."

Charlotte was gasping. "But I didn't know he was married," she said.

"Oh, come now," answered the lawyer, "are you trying to tell me that a woman in your position doesn't take the trouble to know all about a man she has been seen with as much as you have been with Mr. Lefcort?"

"It's true," said Chalotte.

A TERRIBLE CLIMAX

"Well," went on the other, "I've given you warning."

"Do you mean I'll have to go to court?" asked Charlote.

"What do you think?" countered the other.

Charlotte suddenly hated Harley Lefcort because he never told her he was married—and now she was faced with an ordeal that made her shiver. What would Van Lear say?

But she had to tell him. His reception of the news took quite a different form than the one she expected—he put his arms about her and kissed her.

"Well, well," he said, "I know your heart's in the right place but these little flirtations—"

Charlotte burst into tears, "Oh, Van, you're too good to me—I don't deserve it—I've been a fool—won't you please help me?"

Van Lear reassured her—somehow papers were never served. Lefcort, after vain attempts to see Charlotte, wrote her a letter accusing her of fickleness—called her a flirt and a trifler—. She burned it, cut him dead on the street, stung by the epithets she knew she deserved.

Mr. Lefcort moved out of town without ever discovering the cause of Charlotte's sudden change of attitude. Van Lear himself breathed more freely when he heard Harley had gone. He said as much to Marshall, who happened to be a friend from a neighboring town.

"It was a great thing you did for me," said Van Lear. "I'll never forget it."

"Well," said Marshall, "you're the only man I'd have done it for. Perhaps it was a bit dangerous, but it was in a good cause—desperate diseases require desperate remedies—besides I didn't actually say Lefcort was married—it's lucky women have vivid imaginations."

FACTS, FIGURES SHOW COURSE OF EVENTS

By B. C. FORBES

Decide for yourself, after reading the following summary of actual favorable events whether business, industrial, agricultural, employment recovery is under way.

That there has been quite extraordinary recovery of strength in banking, investment currency, credit and other strictly financial conditions needs no recital of recent developments: stocks have rebounded fully 100 per cent.

Please understand that only encouraging facts are presented.

Industry and Trade

Exports of steel products are increasing.

U. S. Steel Corporation will spend $5,000,000 rehabilitating plants.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Paine, Webber & Co.—As a tentative date to have in mind for possible temporary terminus of the current upswing which began seven weeks ago, we suggest the impending holiday. Although we doubt that any important or substantial setback will develop before Labor Day, it is advisable to observe particularly the action of the railroad stocks for indications of an earlier temporary top in the market as a whole. Meanwhile, this week should provide opportunity for excellent trading profits in leading active issues.

Shields & Co.—The list is entitled to a fairly good shakeout, but it is unlikely that any drastic setback reviving all the old fears will be experienced. A careful trading policy should be followed for the immediate future but any sharp setback should be taken advantage of to purchase the leaders as soon as offerings dry up and trading quiets.

Edward B. Smith & Co.—The trend of the market continues toward higher levels and we are looking for increased activity in this direction this week.

Cuban Radio Tax To Lower Profit

Washington, Aug. 29—New Cuban radio taxes which cover all types of receiving sets are expected to reduce the already thin profits of radio dealers in the Republic, according to advices to the Commerce Department from its Havana office. The former tax on radios, it is pointed out, covered only those with nine tubes or over and therefore affected comparatively few owners.

Under the new law graduated taxes based on the number of tubes range from $3 to $10 annually.

Trend in Railroad Traffic Unchanged

New York, Aug. 29—Car loadings in July showed little change in rate of decline below 1931 from preceding months. Aggregate total was slightly higher than June for most carriers, due to seasonal factors, but reductions below a year ago averaged 25 per cent to 40 per cent.

Outstanding results were made by Bangor & Aroostook which continued its improvement of recent months, showing a decrease for the month below a year ago of 3.8 per cent. International-Great Northern reported a reduction of 60.7 per cent, due to the fact that it is not receiving the heavy oil traffic from East Texas oil fields which accounted for the large increase last year.

McKesson & Robbins Recalling Workers

Bridgeport, Aug. 29—McKesson & Robbins has recalled 600 employes and increased operating hours from three to five days a week at its Bridgeport plant.

BUILDING RISE IS PREDICTED BY BEALS

By FRANK H. MELOON

Allen E. Beals, publisher of the Dow Service Daily Building Reports, tells us he sees a building rise in the offing. Mr. Beals says:

Allen E. Beals

"Judged by present trade opinion building construction seems destined to lift itself out of its sub-normal state in three jumps. New York City is rising in its first leap now. Alteration work and additions to existing buildings dominates the daily dissemination of construction news.

"Major new building enterprise, or the second jump, however, lacks definite demand, stabilized wages, cheaper and easier building money, rock bottom material prices and the adoption of building regulations applicable to modern methods of building construction. Wholesale relinquishment of new building projects certainly awaits the realization of these accompaniments for the second symphony of New York City construction.

"The third jump, receiving little analytical thought just now and wholly beyond any organized power to develop or control, is nevertheless gathering momentum in exactly the same manner—but in a different form—that it developed, ahead of time, between 1921 and 1926, incidental to the city's recovery from its last major building decline."

COPPERS SHOW BEST STRENGTH IN WALL ST.

New York, Aug. 29—Copper shares showed the best strength in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today, with utilities following. The rest of the market showed mixed price changes.

A number of the [illegible] moved forward to new highs. These included Anaconda, American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco, up from one to about three points.

RALLIES FOR LOWS

The afternoon saw a number of rallies for earlier lows staged. As the session advanced there were gains of a point or more for American Telephone, Columbia Gas, American & Foreign Power, Westinghouse Electric, Radio preferred "B" and General Electric.

Lackawanna lifted more than three points. Electric Power & Light was up over two points.

Recessions of a point or more at the same time showed for Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas, Eastman Kodak, Coca Cola and Delaware & Hudson. U. S. Steel sold mostly a fraction higher.

Early profit-taking was rather easily absorbed in most issues.

Further sharp gains were registered in the leading commodities markets, as cotton, silk and rubber futures were swept to new highs for the season in early trading. Cotton futures, in an active market, advanced more than $1.50 a bale, bringing the rise from the early June low to more than $20 a bale. All contracts were at the highest level in more than a year.

BONDS ARE HESITANT

The bond market today started the new week in a somewhat hesitant manner, especially in the speculative categories, which have recently recorded spectacular gains.

Profit taking, which developed last Wednesday, after almost two months of steadily ascending prices, was again resumed in some of the low-priced railroads. The tone was rather irregular, however, a number of higher grade issues indicating firm tendencies.

Most of the carriers were steady at the opening, but realizing appeared shortly afterward and quotations began to sag.

The first 49 railroads to report July earnings had net operating income of $8,874,000, against $40,945,000 in July, 1931, and $9,022,000 in June this year.

Gross revenues of these carriers in July totaled $164,271,000, against $258,387,000 in July, 1931, and $167,196,000 in June, 1932.

This trend was continued in today's reports. Net railway operating income for July of roads reporting for today with 1931 comparisons included the following:

	1932	1931
Atlantic Coast Line	*$85,368	*$171,385
Louisville & Nashville	218,779	166,667
Den & Rio Gr Western	57,741	254,145
Chic & East Illinois	191,585	93,071
Louisiana & Arkansas	42,341	187,772

*Deficit.

Week-end trade advices and surveys continued cheerful, still stressing the quickening in textiles. While heavier industries remained sluggish, a little pickup in steel production in the Youngstown area is expected this week. Automobile manufacturing was reported extremely quiet, but some Detroit advices indicated a little more life in retail sales during the past 10 days or so, and a pickup in sales of trucks.

Commission house advices, and the weekly surveys of investment services, continued to stress the rapidity of the recent advance in the security markets, and to discuss the possibility of a technical reaction.

GIANNINI SEES TRADE GAIN

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

A. P. Giannini, the man who came back in the Transamerica and Bank of America situations, predicts trade improvement in California for the remainder of the year.

Giannini, after winning a dramatic proxy fight, regained control of his companies in February when the spirit of panic was at its height. Pursuing saving methods, he forthwith arrested the decline of deposits of the bank, and inaugurated a successful campaign for augmenting deposits.

"I am pleased with the turn that affairs have recently taken," Mr. Giannini declared, in a statement prepared for his column. "The sentiment in our district has without doubt shown a marked improvement. As you may know, we recently completed our 'Back to Good Times' radio program. At the close of this program we noted throughout California a decided improvement in morale and a more hopeful and confident attitude toward the future. Since the strengthening of the security markets in the last few weeks, this improvement sentiment has become even more evident, and I believe that it has already caused a small but quite definite improvement in business. I know that the gain in deposits which we have been experiencing has been accelerated recently, particularly commercial deposits. Barring any adverse reaction in stock and commodity markets, it is my opinion that business in California will continue to improve during the balance of the year and that we will have a very substantial and gratifying Christmas trade."

Doubts If Buses Will Displace Rail Lines

New York, Aug. 29—Business recovery is linked closely to good local transportation in all urban communities and business men should co-operate actively in seeing that it is maintained, a report just sent to a national referendum by the Chamber of the United States declares. The report made public here is based on a national investigation by a special committee.

More than fourteen billion passengers are being carried annually by electrical, bus and trolley bus lines in cities and continuance of their service is imperative, the report says.

Financial conditions of most lines are so critical that unless immediate remedial steps are taken service cannot continue, it is declared. Public co-operation which will enable private managements to carry on, or subsidy by public funds, were said to be inevitable. Relief from charges listed as "unfair," which included paving costs taxes sometimes totaling one-tenth of gross receipts, was urged as an emergency measure.

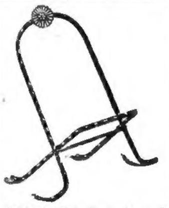
FRISBY HONORED BY BUSINESS LEADERS



WASHINGTON, D. C.—At a pep meeting of the Lace Curtain Stretcher Manufacturers' Association, held here last night, Congressman Horace W. Frisby was presented with a token of esteem in recognition of his tireless efforts to obtain a tariff against foreign lace curtain stretchers. The gift consisted of a beautiful featherweight folding easy chair or straphangers' friend. Mr. Frisby responded to the spirit of the occasion by doffing coat, vest and suspenders and strenuously leading the manufacturers in a song which he composed especially for the occasion. The song follows—

Who in this broad land today
Carries the torch and leads the way
To prosperity? Hip! Hip! Hooray!
Frisby!

Who wipes away the people's tears?
Who's full of vigor for his years?
Who's big and broad between the ears?
Frisby!

Who never hangs his head in shame?
But modestly proclaims his fame?
Don't say you can't recall the name!
Frisby!

RADIO TRIBUTE PAID N. H.

Colorful Salute to Granite State

By N. F. T.

HAIL!
Rugged old New Hampshire,
There to the north it stands,
An everlasting monument
To honest hearts and hands.
Ray D. O'Scribe.

Much that many may not know about the stalwart state of New Hampshire will be brought out tonight during the weekly "Parade of States" program (WEEI) at 9:30. Rich tradition and history-making progress within its borders passes in review.

MUSICAL MEMOIRS.

Compositions by native and adopted sons comprise the musical score, arranged by Erno Rapee. Songs by Edward McDowell, who worked for so many years near Peterboro, where the artists colony was founded in his honor, will also be featured.

• • •

Ballads and legends of men who have sailed out from Portsmouth in Clipper Ships for more than 200 years; these likewise have a prominent place. A stirring essay of tribute, written by Author Bruce Barton, occupies a particular high spot.

• • •

DIXIE DITTIES.

Mills Brothers harmony has decided Southern flavor tonight (WNAC) at 9:15 when the four dusky lads sing "Sweeter Than Sugar" along with "South in My Soul" and "Ida" that good old quartet standby.

• • •

In the city of Atlanta, Ga., book stores declare "Tony Wons' Scrapbook" to be rated high among 1932 best sellers.

• • •

JONES: "Ernie, I don't feel well at all tonight, there's a terrible rumbling in my stomach."

HARE: "No wonder, Billy, it's the truck you ate for supper."

• • •

Backers of those police dramas featured tri-weekly on the "Magic Carpet Hour" would be complimented if they knew how many American youngsters have taken to playing "New York Detective" and arguing over who will be "Barry Rudd" the radio sleuth.

LOCAL LATHER

Boston's Walter Smith, of band leading fame, commands even more respect in NBC inner music circles since it became known he can execute over 100 involved cornet solos without notes before him. Ranny Weeks wouldn't object returning with a dance orchestra to his former Hotel Brunswick spot—eh? Linus Travers, although handling commercial production matters for the Yankee Network, will probably never be content entirely away from active "mike" duty. On the other hand, it has always more or less puzzled the "colyum" here, why John Clark, studio program planner at WBZ, is never heard hereabouts on the air. Bear in mind John was considered the possessor of as personable a voice as ever hit western waves over KYW at Chicago. Hum and Strum keeping four eyes and ears on Ronnie and Van progress lately—eh? Try and connect with Ted Husing at any Hub hotel. Tenor Adrian O'Brian due for some swell song duty soon, even if he hasn't learned so until now. Irwin (WNAC) Cowper writes much of the poetry he recites. Faint rumblings are about cupid having his usual accurate aim, with two well known local studio soloists for targets. Single harness won't be thus very long. Howard Petrie, network announcer for NBC in New York, is somewhere around our fair city vacationing at present, but hasn't shown himself to date. Some day someone may succeed in setting up a microphone behind Charlestown Prison walls. There's talent aplenty in them thar cells.

How and Where to See the Coming Eclipse

On Wednesday afternoon, the moon will pass between the sun and the earth.

The rays of the sun will be obscured.

Darkness will descend upon the earth.

"The birds will take to roost; the cows to the pasture gate."

This is the total eclipse, the astronomical spectacle so rare you might have to live a thousand years to see another one.

Nature is kind to New England in showing us her wares, because we of New England alone will see it.

This "swath of darkness" will be an elliptical spot, 100 miles long and 60 miles wide.

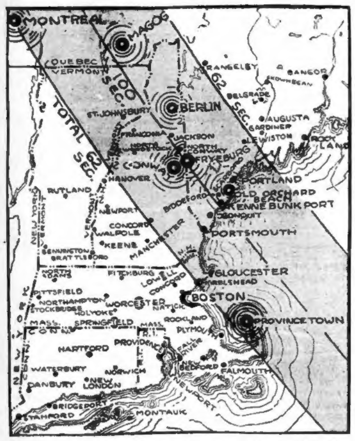
Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and the tip end of Massachusetts will be within this sixty-mile area.

A chart of its path is here published for your convenience.

Be within the area denoted by the lines about 3:30 o'clock, eastern daylight time, on Wednesday afternoon. If you are scientifically minded you will derive useful information. If you are an ordinary layman you will be telling your grandchildren about it in the next generation. Being religiously minded, you will note that the ways of Providence are marvelous, surpassing understanding.

Until the eclipse is total, look at it only through smoked glasses or a square of photograph film that has been exposed to full sunlight and developed.

Face to the northwest. The moon's shadow will be discernible as it passes upon the earth. It will grow in size, sweeping toward you like a black squall at a velocity of 2000 miles an hour. Man's airplane may be fast, but Nature, when so disposed, develops a speed which makes man seem like a heavy truck.



A field glass or small telescope will be used by those who can thus indulge themselves.

There are a few common precautions which mortal man should adopt while Nature puts on this show for his edification and wonderment.

Park your auto, if you are within the 60-mile swath, about half-past two, an hour before the eclipse. Don't try to drive your car and enjoy the eclipse at the same time.

As it grows dark, don't turn on the lights. The glow from a single pair of auto lights would spoil the observation of the eclipse for all the persons within range. Nor should town and city fathers turn on the street lamps, fearing the end of the world. This is Nature's day and let Nature have her darkness to herself in order that we may enjoy it.

The Governors of the New England States have "invited" all the people of the country to come to favored New England for this event. They should come. Even if a cloudy sky impairs this spectacle, they will enjoy our mountains, seacoast, lakes and fertile valleys.

Add 17 More

Seventeen new manufacturing companies started operations in Greater Boston last month, giving employment to 600 industrial workers, according to the Chamber of Commerce.

This makes 142 of them since the first of the year, all of them small, of course, but all of them putting money to work and giving workmen an income. For this much we have to be thankful.

These companies don't just grow, like Topsy. They represent the thought and diligence of their organizers and they represent the encouragement and advice given them by our business organizations. New England has seen more industrial companies created than any other section of the country in the period of financial stagnation and we should give the Boston Chamber of Commerce due credit for its alacrity and industry in the matter.

New York Day by Day

Diary of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, Aug. 29—Out early, and put in to see John Ringling of the circus, but he away; and so to a counting house for a bagatelle of gold, and talking to George Rockwell, a polite young money changer. Then to sit in the sun on a rocky outcrop of Central Park.

Home and typing awhile, and to Pierre Cartier's luncheon at the Metropolitan for the French writer, Pierre Lyautry, an engaging fellow. So walking with Verne Porter along the avenue and heard of his farmhouse in Maryland and of Peter B. Kyne, his house guest, working furiously there, away from a telephone.

Edith Harriman, Karl's wife, and Genevieve Cooper to dinner, and afterward to a cinema, as dull as ever I saw. Home late and fell to reading a book called "Man Made Angry," a horrendous tayle of a poet turned ripper, but parts written with moving beauty.

* * *

On an errand yesterday, I was forced to wait in the dust-powdered room of one of those gloomy brownstone fronts. Oppressive silence was relieved only by the gaunt tick of a heavy ormulu. Every object of furnishing seemed swimming in fluid of dull argentine. An old servitor, with a corresponding 'unereal manner, hobbling up the creaky stairs with my message. The interview was brief with an aged lady propped up in a four-poster bed—an eccentric. Yet the most astonishing memory of all was a fleeting glimpse of a book of Peter Arno's ribald cartoons on her bed table.

* * *

Talk at a luncheon turned to fascinating odors. An essay Lafcadio Hearn once wrote on the subject was recalled by several. It strikes me, one of the most entrancing smells was the yeasty, half sour, half sweet and pungent fragrance wafting from the old-time saloon. There was a tingle of romance, too, in the miniature fortresses of beer kegs stacked in a graduated pinnacle at the sidewalk edge.

* * *

There was also about the old-time saloon a mysterious twilight sifting under and above the swinging doors. Every inquisitive boy in the small towns—and the city, too, likely—nursed a secret hanker to see beyond. Perhaps the savory fumes from the free lunch was a part of the lure. But a little more of this and I'll be reciting: "It was a balmy summer evening and a goodly crowd was there . . ."

* * *

Mayor Walker's glorification in the films has the tentative title, "The Night Mayor." It will show the pleasure-loving executive in his most amiable mood, typifying his credo of "loving life where chandeliers blaze brightest." There may be a few close-ups of the Casino in the park and the Mayor's corner table. The scenario was written by Sam Marx, son of Max Marx, long a well known Broadway tailor.

* * *

Personal nomination for the most astute of the younger theatrical producers—Max Gordon.

Thingumbobs: Polly Moran's nickname is "Pigeon" . . . Wilson Mizner joined the Hollywood hatless before his illness . . . Jack Sharkey's extravagance is pajamas of a wild hue . . . Lowell Sherman walks in the moonlight in carpet slippers . . . E. Phillips Oppenheim has three pet monkeys . . . Vincent Youmans never misses one of those Broadway ballyhoo attractions . . . Al Smith refers to the Empire building as "the shack" . . . Elisabeth Marbury smokes one cigarette a day . . . Gene Markey's caricatures are so excellent that a publisher is coaxing him for a book of them on Hollywood . . . Harry Richman has become the world's most highly paid entertainer.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Life Isn't Fair

"LIFE ISN'T FAIR!" you say, bitterly.

Of course it isn't. Life, per se, is neither fair nor civilized. It is still 90 per cent jungle . . . with every animal in it trying to take advantage of every other animal.

Elsie Robinson

But that condition is neither abnormal nor abominable. It is natural and inevitable.

Human life is still a new business. A short while ago man was little better than a gorilla. In his poor brain something fumbled feebly toward beauty and order. But his acts were the acts of a gorilla. He was cowardly and cruel, greedy and utterly selfish. He was . . . and often is . . . an untamed beast.

You do not need to go to Africa to prove that fact. You can go into the slums of any great city and see people who have never risen above the level of beasts.

You can walk those same streets and see something even more terrible—men and women who were once fine but who, under the pressure of hardship, are becoming beasts again.

And we go back to the beast with terrible ease. A little too much hunger or fear or hate or loneliness and the jungle has claimed us again. And the gentle saint knows secret moments when he is a fiend.

And, painful as it may be, the greatest glory in human life is that inner struggle between the powers of darkness and the powers of light.

No—life isn't fair.

You were born into a rough game. But rough though it is, it was a privilege to be born into that game. There's plenty of punishment in it but there's also plenty of profit.

There is laughter as well as weeping—there is joy as well as sorrow—there is love as well as hate.

Millions of other human beings—as sensitive as you—have found it worth while to endure the punishment of life and face its unfairness for the sake of that profit. Then why shouldn't you?

Everyone else on earth runs risks, takes wallops—why shouldn't you? Everyone else must learn how to dodge danger and plan action—why shouldn't you?

Why should you expect life to be peaceful and rosy—just for you? Why should you expect the other jungle inhabitants to forego all their natural impulses and play pretty—just for you?

Are you such a weakling that you can't stand the gaff—and pay the price?

No, of course you're not. You're brave and you're smart and you're proud. But the trouble with you is—

YOU'RE STILL A CHILD.

You still hate to face horrid reality. You still like to live in dreams. And your pet dream is that you shall be handed happiness on a silver platter. Or, in other words, get your own way without a struggle.

GET OVER IT!

Life doesn't come that way. And it's a blessing it doesn't—or what a bunch of cream puffs we would be!

Life's a tough racket. And you've got to get tough and wise and quick on your foot to tackle it.

So stop your whining. Stop expecting people to play pretty and stop refusing to play with them until they do. You're just wasting the years by waiting like that. Life will NEVER be fair.

PUT AWAY YOUR KIDDIE DREAMS—AND START!

Just Folks

Don't Worry About Your Golf Game

Golf must be played when the heart is free
From care and the mind is at rest,
Or however skilful a man may be,
He can never achieve his best.

They knew him of old as a player fine,
Able and brave and strong,
But strangely his shots were off the line
And all that he did was wrong.

"He has lost his cunning," they whispered low.
"He is lifting his head too much.
He isn't the man that we used to know
With that marvelous putting touch."

But, who bothers to think of a brassie swing
Or the way that a shot is made,
Or looks upon golf as a vital thing
When the whole world seems afraid?

Golf is a game for our happier days,
And not for these times of doubt.
There are too many cares for the man who plays
This summer to think about.

Emerging Alignments of the Campaign

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

THE ACCEPTANCE of the editorship of The Outlook by Alfred E. Smith means that the country will continue to have the benefit of his views on public matters, political and otherwise. He has never posed as a literary figure, but it is easier to find masters of style than to find thinkers, and as far as style is concerned there are not many professional writers who have mastered a method of expression that approaches that of Smith in simplicity, clarity and strength. Through a long period The Outlook has been distinguished by notable editors. When Mr. Smith writes at his desk he will be looked down upon from the wall by Henry Ward Beecher and Theodore Roosevelt, his predecessors in the editorial chair. It was through the medium of this same periodical that Roosevelt continued to impress his virile views upon the country after his retirement from office; and there will be general satisfaction in the knowledge that the judgment and ideals of Smith will not be lost to the public.

* * *

Drys Solidly Back Hoover

The campaign has progressed far enough to disclose some unmistakable alignments. The prohibitionists, the Anti-Saloon League, the partisans of the 18th Amendment have aligned themselves aggressively behind the candidacy of Herbert Hoover. This is intelligent on their part. It remains to be seen whether there is as much intelligence among the liberals. I was in Paris when Mr. Hoover sought, in his acceptance speech, to repeat his performance of blowing hot and cold on the prohibition question. The Paris papers gave the impression that the liberals were delighted and entirely satisfied. Even with the knowledge of the unspeakable stupidity of these foes of prohibition in 1928, it seemed incredible that they could be so asinine as to be deceived by Mr. Hoover again; and especially after the vigorous battle waged by him, through Ogden Mills, with the aid of his three hundred official retainers in the Republican National Convention, against an open, honest repeal plank.

Now that the prohibitionists have enthusiastically enlisted again under Mr. Hoover's banner it will be interesting to observe whether those standing for repeal and immediate modification will lock arms with Dr. Poling.

* * *

Wall Street, Too, Backs Hoover

The last three weeks have demonstrated another alignment, too. Wall Street has aligned itself with Mr. Hoover. It was the policies of Mr. Hoover's Administration and Wall Street that wrecked the business fabric of the nation. For a time it seemed possible that the incredible would happen—that Wall Street would sing sweet and low in the present campaign. Never has the powerful financial group associated with the term "Wall Street" been so unhappily situated for the assumption of an attitude of arrogance. If ever there was a time when common sense and common decency would dictate at least a pretense of humility it is now, with the wreckage all about us.

Then, there was another reason for assuming, until recently, that Wall Street would have no stomach for an aggressive fight in Mr. Hoover's behalf. The President's timidity, his notorious indecision, his passion for procrastination and his utter incapacity for leadership in a crisis were for many months the subject of open denunciation in high financial circles.

But there is no longer any doubt as to the present alignment of Wall Street—it is out to "get Roosevelt" and to continue Mr. Hoover in power. The evidence is overwhelming.

What has happened behind the screen?

Has an understanding been reached with the international bankers regarding the debts?

Is the alignment due to Mr. Hoover's subserviency to the power combines?

Or is it ascribable to the fact that Mr. Roosevelt demands certain reforms for the better protection of the people against the fleecing of the multitude?

Nothing has caused more consternation, both in Administration and international banking circles, than the notable speech of Roosevelt at Columbus, denouncing the Administration's part in leading the inexperienced to their ruin by misrepresentations of conditions during the market madness.

That and his denunciation of the part the Administration has played in making easier the flooding of this country with worthless foreign bonds by unscrupulous banking interests by giving the tacit approval of the American Government to the sale of these securities.

This slashing and yet conservatively worded attack of the Columbus speech has set the hornets to buzzing; but the supercilious denial of Mr. Stimson will not wash.

* * *

Called "Usurpation of Authority"

Senator Carter Glass is not a demagogue, and, commenting on Stimson's denial, he says flatly:

"The recorded facts showed it to be utterly false, and the Senate, without a single dissenting vote, warned the State Department against the continuation of this dangerous usurpation of authority."

Nothing more mendacious and remote from the facts than Mr. Stimson's statement that his department has never approved a single loan could well be imagined. When the Senate passed a resolution on the subject the State Department cited as its authority for approving or disapproving loans, Article II of the Constitution. And so persistent was the State Department that the Senate passed Glass' resolution declaring that the department has no sanction for such action and actually instructing it to refrain from such a policy in the future.

* * *

Other Alliances in the Making

So if Wall Street insists on going into the campaign for Mr. Hoover it must be accommodated. The people are intensely interested. They never have had less faith in the inspired wisdom of our financial leaders—and never less reason for it.

Meanwhile a high-powered propaganda is launched to persuade the people who are jobless and penniless that prosperity is "just around the corner," and we may expect almost daily statements from the "leaders" to this effect. But the jobless still are jobless; the hungry still are hungry, and the farmers of the West are in arms and in revolt.

That rising of the farmers is the most significant thing in months, for farmers are conservative by nature, and when they resort to violence as a protest against utter ruin the country has something to think upon.

Perhaps there is also an alignment among the farmers.

And among the ten million who are jobless.
